Germans, British Both Claim Mastery of Air After Fierce Nazi Attacks on London Suburbs; U.S. Negotiating for Bases in English Possessions

Roosevelt Says No Ship Deal Is Considered In Discussions

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt announced yesterday he was negotiating with Great Britain for naval and air bases in its American possessions as a means of strengthening the defenses of the Western Hemisphere and especially the Panama Canal.

The United States is also engaged in negotiations with Canada, the Chief Executive stated, "looking to the defense of the American hemisphere."

In making this far-reaching announcement at his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt cautioned newspaper correspondents against coupling it with proposals that the United States transfer old destroyers to the British. He said the negotiations had nothing to do with English efforts on this score.

King to Dine With President

Later in the day President Roosevelt announced a conference with Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, of Canada, presumably to discuss questions of American hemisphere defense. King will dine with the President at Ogdensburg, N. Y., tonight, after the latter inspects some 91,000 Regulars and National Guardsmen engaged in maneuvers near the Canadian border.

The day also produced the following important defense developments:

A Senate appropriations subcommittee approved a supplemental defense outlay of more than $5,000,000,000 in cash and contract authorizations. Chairman Adams of the group said that about $60,000,000 had been added to the $4,963,151,957 total approved by the House. The increase was asked by President Roosevelt.

Ford to Build 4,000 Motors

The Ford Motor Co. announced in Detroit it had made arrangements with the Government to construct 4,000 air-cooled aircraft engines and to carry on experimentation with liquid-cooled plane engines.

The War Department simultaneously stated that orders had been placed for the construction of a $25,000,000 smokeless powder plant at Radford, Va., capable of turning out 200,000 pounds a day, and the completion of contracts for 56 four-engined bombers and 100 training planes, costing $15,899,000.

Following President Roosevelt's announcement, Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, indorsed the plan to acquire bases, and declared the United States faced a "critical" defense situation as the result of developments of the last few days in Europe.

"Time Is Fleeting"

At a press conference, Marshall said he had reference to "the possibilities of the next month in the Western Hemisphere." Discussing the debate over the conscription bill, he declared, "no one can say with certainty the way things are going abroad, that we won't need the additional manpower without delay."

"Time," he added, "is the dominant factor and time is fleeting."

No intimation was given here as to which British holdings in the New World are under discussion, but the Army and Navy high command are known to be concerned

Elwood Packed For Willkie's Speech Today

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Elwood, Ind., Aug. 16.—The long, sometimes rocky road on which Wendell L. Willkie set forth as a youth brings him back to the starting point at noon tomorrow.

Famous now, with a chance to achieve greatness, the 48-year-old Hoosier lawyer comes back to this, the jammed and gayly decorated place of his birth, to accept the Republican nomination for President of the United States.

At 3 p. m. (4 p. m. Washington time), he will deliver his acceptance speech before a great shirt-sleeved multitude in Calloway Park, outlining his political philosophy, setting forth his views on the European war, conscription, business recovery and on other problems of the day.

All things considered—the war

Noble for Willkie 'To Aid Defense'

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—Edward J. Noble, wealthy Connecticut Republican and manufacturer who resigned yesterday as Undersecretary of Commerce in the New Deal Administration, announced tonight that he would work for the election of Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican Presidential candidate.

"In resigning my Government post," he said in a statement, "I told President Roosevelt that I felt I could be really helpful in the field of national defense. My intention to do all I can to insure the election of Mr. Willkie is a part of that program.

"It is my conviction that a change in Administrations will be a vital factor in the unification of the country and the acceleration of defense measures. I know of no more important immediate aid I can give to the national defense than to devote my energies between now and next November to the Willkie campaign."

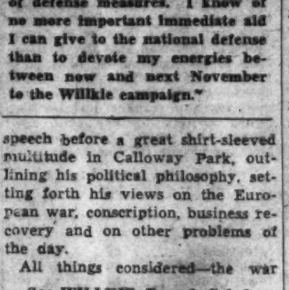
Rockefeller Named Latin Coordinator

Nelson A. Rockefeller, second son of the oil family, was appointed by President Roosevelt yesterday to a new post as coordinator of commercial and cultural relations between the American Republics.

The tall, 32-year-old president of Rockefeller Center, Inc., will serve at no pay, receiving merely subsistence, expenses and travel money.

"Another $1 a year man," White House Secretary Early said, in making the announcement.

Rockefeller will work for the Council of National Defense and automatically becomes chairman of the Interdepartmental Committee on Inter-American Affairs. He will work in close cooperation with the State Department and will have offices in that building.



NELSON ROCKEFELLER

The job Rockefeller accepted was created especially for him.

A White House statement said that, at the invitation of the Venezuelan government, Rockefeller recently organized a company to develop new industries. The statement added that Rockefeller had recently received a similar invitation from another South American country.

The White House emphasized that the grandson of "John D." has been actively identified for several years with South American commercial

Past Raids Mere Child's Play With Worst to Come, Germans Warn

By C. Brooks Peters

Berlin, Aug. 16.—Masses of German bombers with their accompanying protectors raided the British Isles, including London, today.

What has gone on heretofore, informed quarters in Berlin declared, has been but child's play compared to the real pressure that is about to be turned on for the first time.

Now, the Germans declare, after six days of intensive air fighting they have won air superiority over the British—with all that implies.

This, they add, required a number of days of furious fighting in which between August 8 and August 15 up to 8 p. m. they shot down 505 enemy planes, mostly pursuiters, with the loss of only 129 machines. Today, they add, because of unfavorable weather conditions, their activities were limited, although they bombed a number of objectives successfully and brought down 65 British planes with the loss of 15 of their own machines.

Defense Called Ineffectual

British antiaircraft batteries, the Germans declare, were not able to prevent the onslaughts of their bombers, and captive balloons and traps or nets, as well as pursuiters were ineffectual in holding off mighty raids.

In the activities which will come in the next days, the Germans declare, it will not only be the task of their air force to inflict as much material damage as possible upon the enemy, his harbors and military appointments, but also to intensify their superiority over his air force.

The German thesis has been, moreover, that once a preponderant air superiority has been won, then it would be possible to undertake a powerful land offensive with a minimum amount of danger and a maximum probability of success.

Suburbs in Ruins, Nazis Say

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 16.—Authorized German sources proclaimed tonight that wave after wave of bombers had hurled lavish destruction on the London environs late today, lining both banks of the Thames with fires, bomb craters and the wreckage of industrial plants.

The British fought back with 3,000 or more planes and with every weapon at their command. Their fury was that of men who know

Japanese Refuse To Share Shanghai Control With U. S.

Shanghai, Aug. 16 (AP).—The Japanese government will not give its approval to the Shanghai defense commanders' decision to split control of the British defense area between United States and Japanese forces, a Japanese naval spokesman declared today.

His statements made clear that the entire problem created by Britain's decision to withdraw her troops from Shanghai still is unsolved as far as the Japanese are concerned, with the outcome possibly depending on how far the United States is prepared to go to enforce the defense committee's decision.

That decision, which was approved today by the Shanghai municipal council, is contingent on acceptance by the governments concerned. It was reached Thursday in a four-hour meeting in which British and American votes carried over Japanese opposition. Italy, fourth country represented, failed to vote.

Blast Darkens Chevy Chase Area

An explosion on a power line at Connecticut avenue and Thornapple street last night plunged into darkness a large area of Chevy Chase, Md.

One resident said a loud report followed what appeared to be a short circuit of the power line. According to police, the area affected was extended over a diameter of about a mile.

Londoners Dig Their Dead From Ruins, Hope for Revenge

Many Tragic Scenes Enacted as Bombs Blast Houses to Bits; Constable Guards Home Where His Children's Bodies Lie

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 16.—I entered the bombed southwestern suburbs of London by motor car this evening, just after the mass German air raids, and the first sight I saw was two dead air-raid wardens lying on the ground in their tin hats and blue overalls.

One had been hit by a fragment of steel; the other didn't have a mark on him.

I found a factory burned to the ground; windows within a mile's radius were smashed.

Two pubs were a tangle of glass, bottles and bricks.

This evening train service to the bombed area is coming back to normal.

Two bombs dropped near a girls' school, but there were no casualties there.

Several persons were killed when a bomb hit the ticket office of a railway station in one of the southwestern suburbs.

Outside one wrecked house a police constable stood guard. Inside were the bodies of his own stepdaughter and her 7-year-old daughter. It was his own home.

Rows of houses near a children's recreation ground were damaged. A number of cars was burned up.

Stores and houses on both sides of one road were wrecked. The roof of a church was damaged.

Machine-gun bullets hit a score of houses, chipping the walls and dislodging roof tiles.

The bombers flew in formation, dropping their loads of bombs in rapid succession.

Delayed-Action Bombs Dropped

Another church was wrecked and a mission hall was cut in two.

A number of delayed-action bombs fell.

Two men at work in a garage were killed, but two girl clerks in the adjoining office escaped uninjured.

A woman who hurried home from the grocery when the raiders came arrived just in time to be killed by a bomb.

One man said, "as soon as the raid started, I ran upstairs and got my wife, who is ill. I carried her to the passage. There was an explosion outside.

"The blast took me off my feet

Greece Calls Up Army After Attack on Ships

Italy Apologizes After Planes Try To Bomb 2 Destroyers

By the Associated Press

Athens, Aug. 16.—The Italian naval attache was reported in reliable circles tonight to have apologized to Premier John Metaxas for the aerial bombing directed at two Greek destroyers today, declaring the Italian fliers had mistaken them for British ships.

(At this point the Greek censor cut the connection in which this story was being telephoned to Budapest. The following matter was received earlier in the evening.)

The Greek government, however, ordered partial mobilization. A high authority declared definitely that the commanders of the destroyers, against which 17 bombs were directed without a hit, had identified the attacking planes as Italian. Witnesses told the same story.

In the mobilization call for August 20 was one category which military quarters said included antiaircraft gunners and observers.

Identification of the attacking planes as Italian was "absolute," the high informant said, and officers of the warships—the Vasilevs Georgios I and the Vasilissa Olga—had so wirelessed the Greek navy ministry.

Nevertheless, the government of

Fiat and Caproni Airplane Works Reported Attacked

London, Aug. 16.—British bombs have lifted the glass roof off a section of the famous Fiat automobile and airplane engine works in Turin, Italy, the air ministry said tonight.

Other pilots flying long-range bombers and taking advantage of the bright moonlight night plumped bombs into the Caproni works at Milan, while members of another squadron "blasted a blast furnace" near Genoa.

These widespread raids in Italy were but one wing of the attack that the British last night and early this morning launched across the Channel.

German Towns Bombed

Britons listening around their radios tonight with one ear cocked in the direction of their own air raid sirens, caught their breath as an announcer read official bulletins, reeling name after name of towns in Germany and the occupied countries whose oil stores, munition factories, supply depots, dock bases and airfields received devastating loads of bombs.

"I never knew we had so many bombers," was one remark. For

Guard's 90,000 Warriors Call Truce Today To Present Arms to Their Commander-in-Chief

By Marshall Andrews

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 16.—America's greatest peace-time maneuvers will pause tomorrow. Ninety thousand National Guardsmen will call a truce to sham warfare to present arms before their commander-in-chief.

Against a background of 21-gun salutes and ringing bugles, President Roosevelt is scheduled to arrive early tomorrow afternoon at Norwood to start an eye-witness checkup of the citizen soldiers who may soon be called on to carry the Nation through its gravest emergency.

Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding the First Army, will greet the Chief Executive and escort him in a motor convoy to Stockholm, N. Y. There the White House car will roll past the rigid lines of 10,000 khaki-clad soldiers of the Forty-third Division, from Maine, Vermont, Rhode Island, many of them youthful recruits whose eyes will strain over bayonet tips for a first glimpse of their chief.

With the President when he entrained at Washington tonight were Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, Chairman Andrew J. May of the House Military Affairs Committee, and the White House military and naval aides, Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan and Brig. Gen. Edwin M. Watson.

Before visiting the Twenty-ninth Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, and including troops from the District, Virginia and Maryland at 4 p. m., he will be driven to the camps of five others. These are the First (regular Army), near Winthrop; the Twenty-sixth (Massachusetts), near Potsdam; the Twenty-second Cavalry Division (Pennsylvania) and the Twenty-first Reconnaissance Squadron (New York), near Pyrites; the Twenty-seventh (New York), at Dekalb Junction; the Forty-fourth (New York and New Jersey), near Dekalb, and First Army troops, also near Dekalb.

When Mr. Roosevelt enters the third corps area, which includes the Twenty-ninth Division, he will be greeted by Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons, commanding the corps, and Gen. Reckord, who will escort him to the camp of the Twenty-ninth. Here again a 21 gun salute will be fired and military bands will play Flourishes and Ruffles and The Star Spangled Banner. Then the President will review the division, massed in rigid lines in its camp area.

He will lunch at First Division Headquarters with officers of the

BULLETIN

London, (Saturday) Aug. 17 (AP).—German warplanes attacked a wide area in Wales before dawn today, dropping a large number of bombs.

Night raiders appeared to have shied away from air defenders over England and Scotland, however.

71 for 18, British Say

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Aug. 17. Great Britain officially charged early today that German bombers, part of a huge air fleet which raided London's suburbs and both sides of the Thames yesterday, made a "deliberate attack" on the "residential town of Eastbourne" and killed "several persons."

British sources declared yesterday's battle proved that Britain, with her 400-mile-an-hour fighter planes and her antiaircraft still controlled the English skies despite the week-long efforts of thousands upon thousands of German planes to win a mastery of the air.

The Eastbourne attack was charged by the air ministry and the ministry of home defense in a joint communique which said that 71 German planes were destroyed against 18 British fighters lost in the tremendous aerial fighting. The British pilots of downed planes are safe, however, the communique said.

[These raids on London led to immediate talk of reprisals by the R. A. F. against Berlin, the New York Times said.]

The main section of the capital of the British Empire was not touched.

The British reported that the far-ranging German raiders, who kept up their forays over southern England last night and early today, dropped bombs "at many points in the country districts of Hertfordshire, Essex, Surrey, Hampshire and Oxfordshire. Little damage was done . . . reports indicate . . . the number of killed was small."

Tilbury Docks Bombed

German planes flew over Wales early today. Bombs were dropped in one town and several casualties were reported.

The Eastbourne charge was the first time that the British have made such a formal allegation in this war. Earlier communiques, however, have told of civilian fatalities and the destruction of buildings, dwelling houses and churches by German raiders.

Eastbourne in peacetime is a famous holiday resort on the English Channel with a normal population of more than 37,000. Early last month it was classed as a defense area after being considered for months as a "safe" area.

In the attack on the London area, bombs fell on the great docksides at Tilbury and on a British airdrome in the Isle of Wight.

They fell, too, within 8 miles of the vast domed St. Paul's Cathedral in east-central London and upon the Thames estuary with its heavy shipping and industrial facilities.

Casualties included an undisclosed list of dead and injured. Residential property was damaged.

This ancient city's millions twice had to take cover—once at luncheon; again just at tea-time.

a preview of the Sunday Post

Those Hats Again!

If you thought women's hats were funny up to now, wait till you see the ones they've hatched out for fall! Fashion Editor Marshall Adams, shown here with one of These Hats, has an article and even funnier pictures of them in Sunday's Society and Women's Section. In this section of Sunday's Post you'll also find a page on Society at Saratoga, Malvina Lindsay's revelations of Summer Bachelors in action, and Mary Haworth's correspondence with a man whose lost his job, his money, his girl and wants to know, "Now what?" (Mary, in stories they join the Foreign Legion. Just a suggestion.)

Is Defense Progressing?

Are you satisfied with the progress of America's defense program? That's the question Gallup put to the voters, and the answers will be found in Sunday's Poll, Section III. Here, too, will be Frank Dennis' review of one of the war's most exciting weeks. The war's developments are still only one factor in our defense moves; politics is equally present. So Folliard, who's gone to Elwood to cover the Willkie acceptance speech, contributes an article on the opening of the campaign, and there's an interesting article on Willkie's campaign manager, a former magazine editor and political novice.

Hollywood Likes Her

Her heart belongs not to Daddy but to Hollywood, now, though Texas still sticks to her accent and New York pushed her to fame. The story of Mary Martin is the feature in the Amusement Section of Sunday's Post. In this same section, the art page carries examples of Nast's cartoons, now on exhibition here, and gives their story. It was these cartoons which, during the Civil War, Lincoln called "our best recruiting sergeant," and which later turned to destroy the Tweed ring. Getting back to the theater, you'll enjoy the columns by Nelson Bell, Hedda Hopper and Louella Parsons, and in Section III there's a special article by Richard Coe on the Belasco Theater. It's sold to the Government now, another Washington landmark to fall, and Coe brings you the story, with lots of anecdotes, of the Belasco's glittering past.

One of Six Million

"Our Town In Pictures" this week gives you the picture story of the world's largest and most complete library—the Library of Congress, whose six million books and pamphlets and four million maps and charts attract a million visitors every year. The book pictured here is from the Library's collection of rarities: printed in Verona in 1472, its pages include these sketches of the world's first machine gun!

Ford to Build 4,000 Motors For U. S. Planes

Air-Cooled Engines Will Be Produced For War Department

By International News Service

Huron Mountain, Mich., Aug. 16.—The Ford Motor Co. shortly will start manufacturing 4,000 air-cooled airplane motors under a contract with the War Department, Henry Ford announced late today.

The announcement brought a prompt denial from Assistant Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson at Washington, who stated negotiations had been under way for several weeks, but that signatures had not yet been affixed to a contract.

Ford made the announcement at his Huron Mountain summer home. Shortly after, it was learned a representative of William S. Knudsen, National Defense Council chairman, visited the Ford plant today in Dearborn, Mich., and reportedly left with the signed contract.

Ford also stated his company shortly will begin manufacturing planes of its own design powered by liquid-cooled motors designed by company engineers. The plane was expected to be a two-motored ship, similar to the Army's fighters, or a medium sized bomber.

Commenting on the contract, already assertedly signed, Ford declared:

"Manufacture of the 4,000 motors will not deter in any way the manufacture of planes of our own design which the company will produce shortly, using a liquid-cooled motor of our own."

Col. Charles Lindbergh and other noted aviators have conferred several times with Ford on the type of plane to be produced.

156 Planes Ordered

A $15,899,642 order with two manufacturers for 156 bombing and training planes was announced yesterday by the War Department.

A $14,861,342 contract for 56 four-engine bombers was awarded to the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, San Diego, Calif., which already is building the long-range craft for both the Army and Navy.

The Fairchild Aircraft Division, Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corporation, Hagerstown, Md., was given a $1,038,000 order for 100 training planes.

The department did not announce the date on which delivery of either group of planes is to be expected.

The order was the third announced since Congress in June voted $400,000,000 for approximately 4,200 additional Army planes.

U. S. Seeks Bases From British principally about the islands of the Lesser Antilles, extending southward from Puerto Rico to South America.

Most important of these from a military standpoint is Trinidad, which controls the southeastern approaches to the Caribbean Sea. An American air base established there, also would enable this Nation to block any attempt of an enemy to gain a foothold anywhere in the northern half of South America, military experts declare.

May Seek Facilities, Too

British naval bases already exist in Bermuda, Jamaica, and at Port Castries on the island of St. Lucia. The fact that President Roosevelt spoke of acquiring bases rather than sites for bases, led some observers to believe he is negotiating for such facilities.

President Roosevelt would reveal no details of negotiations. Declining to state whether leasing the sites is contemplated, he declared what he was trying to do was to get bases. He said that quid pro quo would be given for any acquisitions, but he didn't know what it would be.

London Reveals Offer

In London the United Press quoted authoritative British sources as saying that Prime Minister Winston Churchill had formally offered the United States 99-year leases on all British islands between Newfoundland and Guiana for use as bases. These sources the United Press said, declared there is no question of selling the islands and that the discussion of the island bases was not linked with proposals the United States transfer destroyers to Britain.

President Roosevelt also announced that Maj. Gen. Delos Emmons, commander of the General Headquarters Air Force; Brig. Gen. George V. Strong, Army war plans chief, and Rear Admiral Robert L. Ghormley, assistant chief of naval operations, were in England as war observers at the invitation of the British.

It was the first intimation that the two generals had gone abroad, although Admiral Ghormley's departure had been revealed. The President said the visit of the observers, the British negotiations and the Canadian discussions were three separate things and not connected. After telling reporters about the negotiations for bases, Mr. Roosevelt voluntarily authorized the direct quotation in the matter:

"The United States Government is holding conversations with the government of the British Empire with regard to the acquisition of naval and air bases by the United States for American hemisphere defense with special reference to the Panama Canal.

Reporters Cautioned

"The United States Government is carrying on conversations with the Canadian government looking toward defense of the American hemisphere."

Mr. Roosevelt cautioned reporters not to go beyond the limits of his statement and make assumptions. He indicated clearly, however, that he himself was carrying on the negotiations directly with Britain.

Pepper Hopes for Ship Trade

Senator Pepper (Democrat), Florida, expressed hope that any negotiations for bases would involve transfer of the destroyers for defense of the British Isles.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, of the House Naval Committee—"It is essential for the defense of the Panama Canal that we have outlying bases."

Chairman May (Democrat), of the House Military Committee—"I am 100 per cent for it, and I hope the negotiations will be quickly concluded."

Elwood Jammed For Willkie Speech

abroad together with its implications for the United States and the public opinion polls that show Willkie running neck and neck with President Roosevelt—tomorrow's oration is one of the most eagerly awaited in American political history.

Willkie's intimates were confident today that he would "ring the bell," and so continue to be a man "in front of a trend."

The amateur in politics who seven weeks ago, amid "We Want Willkie!" cries from the galleries, captured the Republican nomination in Philadelphia, is coming here on a special train from Rushville, where he and Mrs. Willkie are spending tonight at the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Phillip Wilk.

At Rushville today, Willkie visited unconcernedly with neighbors, inspected his five farms and roamed the streets of the town where his wife was born.

He will come into a little Hoosier town of 11,000 that, overnight, has jumped its population more than twentyfold a town ablaze with flags, bunting, and pictures of the hero who put it on the map.

He will see street hawkers selling Willkie shirts, Willkie ties, Willkie hats, Willkie songs, Willkie drinking glasses, and Willkie sandwiches.

He will see automobiles bearing tags from every State in the Union. He will see hundreds of out-of-town traffic cops, giving "stop"and "go" signals on streets that have never known the tread of a traffic cop before.

Already today North Anderson street—the main stem here—was so jammed that it was almost impossible to move.

Willkie will be escorted by ten Indiana State policemen mounted on motorcycles. Secret Service men never join a nominee until he is elected.

The nominee will be greeted at the railroad station by the American Legion Post No. 19, of Akron, Ohio, of which he was commander back in the days when he was a rising young lawyer and was crusading against the Ku Klux Klan.

He and Mrs. Willkie; her mother, Mrs. Wilk, and young Philip Willkie will ride in car No. 1 in the procession through Elwood.

Representative Joseph M. Martin, of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National Committee, will ride in car No. 2, along with Representatives Charles A. Halleck, of Indiana, who placed Willkie in nomination at Philadelphia; Mrs. Grace Reynolds, Republican National Committeewoman for Indiana, and Ernest Morris, national committeeman.

In car No. 3 will be George L. Bonham, Elwood's first Republican mayor in 30 years, and Homer E. Capehart, the fellow who is responsible for cutting down cornfields and otherwise preparing Elwood for a crowd that may run anywhere from 150,000 to 300,000.

The caravan will wind through the tree-shaded streets and pass the little two-story frame house in which Willkie was born on February 18, 1892. Here Willkie may see something he might not like—the current tenants charging 20 cents for a look around. But nobody ought to judge this harshly, because times have been hard in Elwood since the tin-plate plant shut down.

Pause at High School

The parade will stop at the Elwood High School, where Willkie as a youth studied and played his pranks. From the steps—steps which he was made to scrub on more than one occasion because of those same pranks—Willkie will greet old schoolmates, relatives and old friends.

On that memorable June night when they were balloting in Philadelphia, Willkie picked up a long-distance telephone and told some friends here that if the impossible did happen, he would have the notification ceremony staged on the high school steps.

But long ago it became apparent that the area before the high school would not accommodate one-twentieth of the crowd that wants to see and hear Willkie tomorrow.

In the ceremony at the high school, Willkie will be presented by Senator James J. "Puddler Jim" Davis, of Pennsylvania, who once worked in the tinplate mill here.

At 2:25 p. m. the Willkie party, with newsreel men riding ahead to film the scene, will start for Calloway Park. On the way, Willkie will pass over Duck Creek, the little stream in which he made his first efforts to swim.

7-Week-Old News

As Willkie arrives at Calloway Park, a sprawling, tree-shaded retreat of 60 acres that was donated by a man who was once Elwood's No. 1 citizen, the band will play "Back Home Again in Indiana."

Representative Halleck will preside and present Dr. William Lowe Bryan, president emeritus of Indiana University, who will give the invocation. John Charles Thomas then will sing, "God Bless America."

Off to Elwood To Hear Willkie

WILLKIE ROOTERS—Prominent Washington Republicans left town yesterday for Elwood, Ind., to hear Wendell Willkie formally accept the G. O. P. nomination today. Albert Stabler (at left), veteran 77-year-old Republican rooter and insurance man, received a Willkie badge from Gene Porter at G. O. P. Washington campaign headquarters before leaving. Leading the group was Edward F. Colladay, Republican National Committeeman for the District. Jackson Asked to Probe Reported G. O. P. Violations of Hatch Act in Indiana

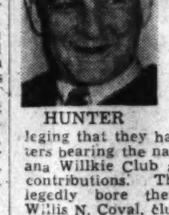
Acting Work Projects Commissioner Howard O. Hunter yesterday asked Attorney General Robert H. Jackson to investigate alleged Republican violations of the Hatch Act among WPA workers in Indiana.



HUNTER

Hunter referred to Jackson complaints from WPA workers, forwarded by Indiana Administrator John Jennings, alleging that they had received letters bearing the name of the Indiana Willkie Club and inviting $1 contributions. The letters allegedly bore the signature of Willis N. Coval, club chairman.

Hunter sent Jackson a letter purportedly addressed to William Bault, of Bloomington, Ind., WPA area supervising timekeeper, along with several enrollment cards and an envelope bearing the return address of the club headquarters at Indianapolis.

The Hatch Act makes it unlawful knowingly to receive or solicit a political contribution from a person paid from Federal work or direct relief funds.

No Ohio Speech

Charles Sawyer, Democratic National Committeeman from Ohio, said after a visit at the White House yesterday, that President Roosevelt had no intention of going into Ohio for a campaign speech.

Asked by reporters whether the State did not have defense establishments that the President might inspect, Sawyer mentioned Wright Field at Dayton and said: "I sure wouldn't object if he showed up to look over that."

Sure of Front Seat

Chicago, Aug. 16 (INS).—Leaving Chicago for Elwood, Ind., where he will witness Wendell Willkie's notification ceremonies, the candidate's brother, Edward E. Willkie, said today:

"This is a new experience for me. It's the first time I ever went to a big celebration where I was assured of a front seat."

Defense Sidelights

Training of Parachute Troops To Be Enlarged by U. S. Army

By the Associated Press

Yelm, Wash., Aug. 16.—Brig. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, chief of the Army's operations training program, said today that the recently begun program of training parachute troops in Eastern Army centers would be enlarged soon.

ANDREWS

"We're developing the technique of parachute troops now," he said, "and the present troops undergoing training in Maryland and Georgia will be used as instructors. Teaching troops to parachute is the easiest part of their training. The hardest and longest job is teaching them their duties after they land."

Arsenal Short of Labor

Philadelphia, Aug. 16 (AP).—Faced with a shortage of skilled workers in Pennsylvania, officials of the huge Frankford Arsenal sent out a call today to other States for the 3,000 craftsmen "urgently needed" under the intensified national defens program.

The arsenal, recently advertised for skilled workers but, said Maj. Ulysses J. L. Peoples, jr., commanding officer, a two-week registration found only 70 qualified men.

"Many of the unions, particularly the A. F. L. unions," Peoples said, "have simply abolished the apprentice class in order to protect journeymen workers. Now in this period of emergency, we are beginning to realize what that means."

C. D. Herizog, manager of the U. S. Civil Service for this district, said the Government has sought skilled men for a month, but added: "There just don't seem to be any, and as a result we have had to raise the age limit from 50 to 62 years, and have had to drop apprenticeship requirements from four to two years."

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—A spokesman for the British Purchasing Commission said today that munitions orders placed in the United States were being "constantly accelerated" and that the "loss in shipments to England is infinitesimal."

To describe the order acceleration, the spokesman said that whereas contracts of last October were placed at a rate averaging five a day, the average day now sees 25 to 40 placed.

He said the machine-tool industry is "performing miracles" in meeting the demands of the British government.

WPA to Help List Aliens

WPA aid was enlisted yesterday by the Justice Department for the big job of registering and fingerprinting the more than 3,500,000 aliens now in this country.

With the task—directed by the current session of Congress—scheduled to get under way August 27 and to last through December 26, Commissioner F. C. Harrington announced that WPA's part in the program would be that of "making generally known" the requirements of the registration law and in assisting aliens in filling out and filing registration forms.

Harrington said that WPA, through its various community service projects, was in position to reach many noncitizens.

Hercules Company To Build Factory Near Radford, Va.

The Army yesterday concluded a deal with the Hercules Powder Co. for the construction of a $25[illegible]00,000 smokeless powder plant near Radford, Va., some 44 miles west of Roanoke.

To be completed in ten months, the plant will have a capacity of 200,000 pounds of powder a day. This is equal to the expected capacity of a plant now being constructed in Indiana by the du Ponts, which when the contract was let some weeks ago, officials estimated would triple the Nation's powder production capacity.

Some 2,500 acres of land near Radford are being purchased for the plant, and construction will begin at once. Construction will employ 5,000 men and when completed the factory will require a force of about 2,500 men. The Hercules Co. will build and operate it on a fixed fee basis, with title to the plant remaining with the Government.

Rockefeller Named To $1-a-Year Post

It was thought likely yesterday that young Rockefeller would handle details of the much-amended cartel plan if it is placed in operation. Remedies for the South American surplus situation would probably receive first attention at his hands.

Further, there were credible reports that Rockefeller might be asked to create and manage a counter-propaganda campaign in Latin America designed to overcome and neutralize German propaganda.

The State Department's division of cultural relations, in existance about two years, has been handling mostly the exchange of students, periodicals and other literature. It has steadfastly kept away from what might be called a pro-American propaganda campaign in the Latin nations.

Rockefeller's appointment gave strength to reports in the Capital that the Administration is planning to lay down a barrage of press and radio material below the Rio Grande in efforts to correct the impression about the United States that is being created by the Nazi press and radio.

Into this picture would enter monitored broadcasts, special short-wave programs in Spanish and Portuguese and extension of American news services.

There are a great many coordinating problems to which Rockefeller could give his attention, it was said. New steps in the trade campaign in South America require someone to coordinate all the phases that separately affect the Defense Commission, Commerce Department, State Department, Justice Department, Agriculture Department and RFC.

Rockefeller has resigned as director and officer of the enterprises with which he was associated in South America and has obtained a leave of absence from Rockefeller Center, Inc. He will continue as president of the Museum of Modern Art.

Unprecedented Drive

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—Friends of Nelson Rockefeller said his appointment today as coordinator of commercial and cultural relations would be a major step in an unprecedented drive to counteract Fascist influence in Latin America.

His job, they said, would be to tie together the efforts of all branches of the Federal Government which had any bearing on affairs in the Western Hemisphere.

Rockefeller has visited most, if not all, the countries below the Rio Grande and often has expressed the conviction that the greatest problem of inter-American relations is that of human understanding.

Learned Spanish

He believes, for example, that businessmen who work in South America should adopt the Spanish language and customs. He went to Spanish school for weeks before he made his first trip, thus shaming scores of employes of the Creole Petroleum Co.—a branch of the Rockefeller-founded Standard Oil—into doing likewise.

He also set the Creole Co. into cooperation with the government of Venezuela in improving education, health and general social conditions.

He has sponsored shows of Latin-American art in the Museum of Modern Art.

He recently headed a group to build a modern hotel in Caracas. His friends said he considered this project a test tube to show the value of Latin America as a land of profitable North American investment. They predicted that if it succeeded, Rockefeller money would be poured into the building of other parts of the South American continent.

The Gallup Poll

Sending 'Mercy Ships' Favored if Safe Conduct Is Assured

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 17.—Widespread public approval of the bill now before Congress to bring English children to the United States in American "mercy ships" is indicated today in a national survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

DR. GALLUP

The House of Representatives has already passed legislation which will permit American vessels to enter the forbidden "war zones" to evacuate English refugees, provided all of Europe's belligerents guarantee "safe conduct" to those vessels.

As the measure awaits Senate action, the Institute survey shows that a majority of voters in all sections of the country are in favor or such a gesture.

63 Per Cent Favor Help

The Institute put the following question to men and women throughout the United States:

"It has been suggested that the United States send American passenger ships to England to bring English refugee women and children to the United States to stay until the war is over. Would you approve or disapprove of sending our ships if Germany and Italy agree not to attack them?"

The voters replies are:

APPROVE SENDING SHIPS	63%
DISAPPROVE	37%

Approximately 1 voter in 12 said he was undecided or without an opinion on the question.

Must Have Safe Conduct

President Roosevelt has emphasized that no ships will be sent for English refugees unless safe-conduct promises are obtained from Europe's warring nations, and the Institute's tests show that such guarantees are highly important to the American people.

"We don't want to take the responsibility for bringing these children across the Atlantic," voters in the survey frequently say, "unless we know they'll be safe from attack."

In a supplementary Institute study, in which the safe-conduct guarantee was not stated, only 45 per cent said they would be willing to send American ships into the war zone.

Five Million Havens Seen

The typical attitude of those who favor sending American "mercy ships" is that "we have the ships to bring them here, and there are lots of American homes ready to take care of them." Previous Institute tests have shown that as many as 5,000,000 Americans would consider lodging one or more children until the end of the war.

Wide public discussion of the question of "mercy ships" began with surrender of France in June, when it appeared that the British Isles might become the next target of Nazi attack. The present survey shows the strongest support for the refugee bill in the South (where 67 per cent approve) and among upper-income stratum voters (66 per cent).

The sectional vote is:

	Approve	Disapprove
New England
Midatlantic	64%	36%
East Central	59	41
West Central	64	36
South	67	33
West	60	40

New Yardstick For Profit Tax Proposed

House Committee Reverses Itself, Agrees Tentatively on Change

Posed with the prospect that first efforts to give more "flexibility" in the base period for determining average earnings for computing profits would mean a net loss of $33,000,000 in the estimated 1941 yield of $190,000,000 from the proposed excess profits tax bill, the House Ways and Means Committee reversed itself yesterday and tentatively agreed on another new formula.

The basic idea of the legislation is to apply a tax on the part of the profits which are in excess of a corporation's average earnings during a base period in the past. Originally the tax subcommittee, after considering plans submitted both by the Treasury and the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, decided to make this base period the four years of 1936-1939, inclusive.

As the result of testimony urging more flexibility given at recent hearings the full committee yesterday agreed on a formula under which a corporation might select the three out of the four years in the base period as best suited its purpose. When the Treasury's estimate of an $83,000,000 revenue loss under such a procedure was received, necessity of reconsideration was obviously necessary.

The new scheme, Chairman Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, of the tax subcommittee announced, would require earnings for each of the four years to be combined and an average taken.

If a company suffered a loss in one of those years, the total for that year would be figured at zero, and the profits for the other three years would be divided by four to get the average.

He gave this example: A company lost $100,000 in 1936 and earned $100,000 in each of the other three years. The total earnings for the period would be figured at $300,000, or an average of $75,000, which would become the base, tax-exempt credit allowable on earnings in 1940, for instance.

Rappahannock Span Work to Start in October

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 16.—Work on a new bridge to cross the Rappahannock River at this city is expected to start about October 1, City Manager L. J. Houston, jr., said today after the State highway department had called for bids for its construction. The bids will be opened August 29.

The bridge will be constructed of reinforced concrete, will be 1,006.6 feet in length and will have ten spans. The roadway will be 40 feet and two footways will be provided for pedestrians.

The present Free Bridge is to be torn down and the new one erected on its site with no change of alignment. The floor will be approximately three feet above the last high water mark at the abutments on the Fredericksburg and Stafford County ends and will rise gradually to about seven feet above high water in the center.

Capital to Launch Big Safety Drive

$12,000 to Be Spent To Save Lives, Beginning Aug. 30

By Howard F. Wentworth

Washington will start spending $12,000 August 30 to protect the lives of its citizens on traffic-clogged streets in one of the most intensive safety drives yet undertaken.

The city's accident fatality toll for 1940 now stands at 44. To curb further tragedies and end the year with an unequaled safety record is the program's immediate aim, authorities announced yesterday. The forthcoming drive will be a continuing, year-around affair.

Sponsored by the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council with Congressional and WPA funds, the movement will get underway with a city-wide blast at the careless habits of both motorists and pedestrians.

The program will be directed by A. Julian Brylawski, chairman of the council's safety promotion committee, with the pledged support of every municipal department head.

Not Satisfied to Coast

The District has $7,500 in Congressional appropriations for safety work and WPA has contributed an additional $4,500, Brylawski said. Every cent, he added, will be spent to make Washington conscious of its highway dangers.

Although the death toll at this time last year was 53, Brylawski said police and traffic officials are not satisfied with "coasting along" on this year's improved record.

Posters bearing safety slogans—3,000 cardboard and 1,000 paper—will appear in all sections of the city. Two slogans have been selected "Deadly power in your hands, use it sanely" for motorists and "The curbline is the danger line" for pedestrians.

Movies to Spread Message

Motion picture houses throughout the city have agreed to run special films warning of traffic dangers. The pictures are being made in New York, Brylawski said, and new issues will come out every three months.

Radio stations will carry "spot" safety announcements periodically each day after the drive opens and unique contests to interest young and old have been arranged.

"We are going to try to make the city so conscious of traffic dangers that every accident will be taken as a personal matter by citizens," said Brylawski.

And coincident with opening of the drive, the new police "crash" squad, newest weapon against highway casualties, is expected to begin operation next week under the command of Inspector Arthur E. Miller, recent graduate of the Northwestern University Traffic Institute.

Four Injured In Accidents

Four persons, including a 4-year-old boy were injured last night in traffic accidents in the District.

The child, Joseph Wolowsky, of Arlington, Va., was taken to Georgetown Hospital with a compound fracture of the right leg and head injuries when he was struck down by an automobile in front of his home.

Felled by a street car at Seventh and P streets northwest, Rose Marinakis, 41, of 1011 Seventh street northwest, suffered body abrasions including lacerations of the left side. The motorman was Fred Carpenter, of Takoma Park, Md., police reported.

Harry Ferguson, 29, of 21 K street northeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital for scalp cuts and leg injuries when he was struck by a car, police said was driven by Alfred Santilla, 21, of 41 H street northeast, at North Capitol and K streets northeast. Ellsworth French, 25, of Seat Pleasant, Md., suffered a leg fracture in an accident in Seat Pleasant, Md.

Just Typical Couple, but 'Reds' Now Because of Peace Views

200 Persons Here Work for Ideals Popular a Year Ago, but Regarded Today as Dangerous by Many

He is on the Government pay roll with a salary of about $2,000 a year while his wife makes a home of their three-room apartment. Probably they're a little lonely for the companionship of others.

This man and wife are "typical" members of the Washington Peace Mobilization, according to Ann Remington, executive secretary of the organization.

Variously branded Reds, fifth columnists, screwballs and Trojan jackasses, nearly 200 persons, she said yesterday, are working steadily toward the ideal of peace for Americans—a popular ideal a year ago that is today regarded dangerous by large numbers of Americans because of threats of war.

Immediate goal of the organization is to send delegates to a Chicago Peace Mobilization August 31 to organize all peace groups into a single national body, she continued.

"We don't have any millionaires in the group," Miss Remington said. "Anybody can join. More than 100 have paid the dues of 50 cents a year which helps defray office expenses and mailing of literature. All work is volunteer.

There were half-a-dozen men and women working in the organization' office at 1410 H street northwest yesterday, preparing mimeograph stencils and addressing envelopes. Each day sees a group volunteers eager to work, said Miss Remington.

She pointed out that many members of the Washington Peace Mobilization belong to labor and other organizations, but are members of the group as individuals and not as representatives of other bodies. The local body was started in June of this year when "the European situation and the general trend in Washington caused many people to see a trend toward war," Miss Remington explained.

In order to raise funds for the delegates to the Chicago gathering parties are being held this evening at the Town House, Nineteenth and F streets northwest; at 1638 Florida avenue northwest, and at 2411 Fourteenth street northeast. At them the Peace Mobilizers expect to dance, listen to music, and have a good time.

Caroline Walters' Will in Probate; Children Get Bulk

Reno, Nev., Aug. 16. (INS).—The will of the late Caroline Roebling Walters, granddaughter of the engineer who built the Brooklyn bridge, was admitted to probate yesterday by the Nevada State Supreme Court.

The court's decision, upholding a previous ruling by District Judge Benjamin Curler, means that Paul A. Walters, Reno automobile dealer and husband of the late heiress, will not share in any part of her $2,000,000 estate.

The bulk of the estate, according to terms of the will, goes to her two children by a former marriage, who are now living with their father, Alexander Hagner, Washington, D. C., attorney.

Mrs. Walters accidentally shot herself to death several months ago while cleaning a gun in her Reno home.

One Is Injured In Freak Crash At Seat Pleasant

One man was injured late yesterday in a freak off-the-road auto crash at Seat Pleasant, Md., in which both drivers were charged with reckless driving by Prince Georges County police.

A truck, driven by James G. Vidi, of Rollins avenue, Seat Pleasant, swerved to pass a stationary bus and then pulled off the road to the left to avoid hitting an approaching car.

The car, driven by James C. Brincefield, of 1424 Kearny street northeast, Washington, swerved to the right in an attempt to avoid a collision and crashed into Vidi's truck on the gravel roadside.

Greece Mobilizes Against Italy

this small pro-British kingdom—facing what some diplomatic observers interpreted as substantially an undeclared war—carefully refrained from comment, insisting that the bombers were of "unknown" nationality.

The destroyers were attacked en route to the Island of Tinos in the Aegean Sea, where only yesterday the Greek cruiser Helle was mysteriously torpedoed—by an "unidentified" submarine, said the Greek government.

There were signs that the government would maintain its policy of official silence, in the belief that these attacks were planned to force Greece to abandon her neutrality. The country has a guarantee of support from Britain if her independence is attacked.

Fascists Say British Sank Greek Warship

By the Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 16.—Fascists declared angrily today that the torpedoing of the Greek cruiser Helle was "a second Athenia," perpetrated by the British navy to provoke a Greek-Italian explosion.

At the same time, they said Italy would demand Greek reparations for the beheading, allegedly by two Greeks, of Daut Hoggia, Albanian "patriot," near the Greek border recently.

Persons who write with authority snapped back at suggestions that the Italians torpedoed the Helle off Tinos Island yesterday and said it was evident to them that the whole thing was a "new plot."

Nothing was said immediately about the bombing of Greek warships todays by planes declared in Athens to have been Italian.

By calling the case a "second Athenia," Fascists referred to German contentions that the British sank their own liner Athenia the night of last September 3 in the expectation that the tragedy would be blamed on the Germans.

Rising Waters Close 40 Va. Highways

Waynesboro Business Area Inundated; Many Trains Blocked

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Aug. 16.—Mounting waters from the muddy James threatened Richmond tonight with a week-end flood crest equaling or possibly surpassing the all-time high of 26.3 feet in 1936, while the crests of other swollen streams also tumbled seaward with similar threats of increasing damage.

F. N. Hibbard, U. S. Weather Bureau meteorologist here, notified Richmond waterfront property owners to prepare for an equal of the 1936 flood Sunday night or Monday morning.

The river rose nearly 3 feet here during the 12-hour period ended at 7 p. m., and flooded Dock street and started climbing the walls of the waterfront terminal.

Highways Blocked

The town of Emporia was inundated today by the Meherrin River, Petersburg was lashed by the spreading Appomattox and high waters reached into the Shenandoah Valley to whip a "flash flood" through the business sections of Waynesboro and temporarily tie up Route 250 traffic. Many other highways also were blocked and rail traffic was held up on several lines.

A hundred families were forced from their homes. Atlantic Coast Line and Southern Railway trains were tied up. Property and crop damage in outlying areas also was reported heavy.

Upward of 40 primary highways, including all highways into North Carolina between South Boston and Suffolk, were closed by the rampaging rivers and creeks.

Appomattox Climbs

Railway traffic also was blocked or impeded seriously in several places by high water and washouts. Southern Railway trains were blocked between Norfolk and Danville, and Richmond and Danville, as well as across the North Carolina line between Asheville and Salisbury. Nine feet of water stopped Norfolk & Western traffic near Clarkton, and traffic between Lynchburg and Durham had been halted since Thursday morning.

The Appomattox climbed toward the 18-foot mark at Petersburg. Already at 17.5, the river appeared certain to sweep into the Norfolk & Western yards and damage other industrial property.

Meanwhile, Farmville, which had been cut off from outside travel, was relieved somewhat by the passing of the Appomattox River crest.

Tonight, however, both the Appomattox and Buffalo rivrs rose again, the latter going to 21½ feet—a foot and a half higher than its previous crest, and the Appomattox to within two feet of its previous maximum. Both appeared to have reached the crest at 7 p. m.

Lynchburg prepared for a 19-foot flood stage after Weatherman David E. Nicholson warned that as long as it kept raining, "we might as well get prepared for anything."

25 omes Carried Away

In Buchanan County some estimated that $100,000 damage was done in Garden's Creek area to roads, homes, crops and power lines. Twenty-five homes were carried away and approximately 100 persons were being provided with shelter.

Roanoke, where more than 13 inches fell in three and a half days, apprehensively watched Roanoke River rise again slightly after dropping 9 feet from the 21.6 foot crest, but the lighter rain did not appear sufficient to return the stream near its former height.

Danville reported that the city's gas plant was shut down at 1 a. m. today but that the supply was sufficient for housekeepers to prepare breakfast and later in the day production was resumed.

The absence of any definite predictions for cessation of the rainfall added worry for wearied flood workers, although they were given some hope that the continued showers would be lighter.

Rockwell Dies; Social Mentor In White House

William E. Rockwell, 59, chief of the Social Bureau at the White House for 21 years, died yesterday at his Arlington, Va., home.

Mr. Rockwell

A native of Centerville, Mo., Mr. Rockwell began his Washington career at the age of 12 as a Government Printing Office messenger.

Transferring to the White House in Theodore Roosevelt's Administration, he became social mentor there in December, 1917.

Through successive administrations he had charge of issuing invitations, arranging functions of state and receiving noted guests. In 1938 he was forced to resign because of ill health.

The White House said yesterday that Mr. Rockwell was held in high esteem by both the Republican and Democratic administrations under whom he served, and by all his White House associates.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Wilhelmina Rockwell, whom he married 30 years ago, his mother, Mrs. Ella Rockwell; a sister, Mrs. William Flanagan, and a brother, Harry Rockwell. He lived at 3417 Ninth street South, Arlington.

Funeral services will be held from Chamber's Funeral Chapel in Georgetown tomorrow at 1 o'clock. Burial will be in Columbia Gardens Cemetery, Arlington County. Services will be conducted by the Rev. M. M. Perkins, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, Georgetown.

Drug Firm Fined $225 on 6 Short-Weight Charges

Fines of $225 had been paid by the Whelan Drug Co., Inc., last night following the firm's conviction in Police Court on six charges of violating the weights and measures law.

Judge George D. Neilson imposed sentence after Charles F. Applegate, chief inspector of weights and measures for the District, testified his agents observed short-weight sales of ice cream in three of the company's stores.

Applegate told the court that his agents on different dates went to the three stores and asked for a pint of ice cream. In each instance, it was testified, they received 12 ounces instead of 16.

100 More Expected; Msgr. Ready to Address Delegates at Luncheon

More than 200 women representing States from Massachusetts to California gathered at Trinity College yesterday to register for the eighth triennial convention of the International Federation of Notre Dame de Namur Alumnae. An informal reception followed registration at the college.

A business meeting at 10 a. m. today at Trinity will bring together the group in addition to about 100 other alumnae expecid to arrive in the city this morning.

The Right Rev. Msgr. Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, will address the gathering at 12:15 p. m. Miss Rita Walsh will preside at a luncheon following Msgr. Ready's address.

This afternoon the group will journey to Ilchester, Md., to visit the novitiate for the province. Tea will be served at the Trinity Preparatory School at which Mrs. Clarence W. Lee will preside.

Highlight of tomorrow's program will be a reception and tea at Notre Dame Academy, North Capitol and K streets. Miss Marietta Dawson will be chairman.

Scalise Aid Says She Erred In Testimony

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 16.—Miss Ann Kimmel, formerly confidential secretary to George Scalise, former president of the Building Service Employes International Union (A. F. L.), testified in his grand larceny and forgery trial today that she had made an error in her previous testimony before a grand jury.

Answering a question by Assistant District Attorney Murray I. Gurfein, by whom she was called as a prosecution witness, Miss Kimmel agreed she had told the grand jury it was Scalise's practice to pay bills and office expenses, submit a statement to union headquarters in Chicago and then be reimbursed.

She then explained to the general sessions jury trying Scalise on charges that he improperly obtained $60,087 from the union that she was thinking at that time only of the last few months before Scalise resigned.

Prior to that time, she testified, it long had been his practice to pay bills, receive reimbursement from Chicago and then send a monthly statement.

Miss Kimmel, also known as Miss Kay, identified a number of checks drawn by Scalise and corresponding notations in his monthly statements. The satement entries, in three cases, exceeded by $100 the amount for which the corresponding checks were drawn.

Asked if she did not know the figures had been "raised," Miss Kimmel replied, "No, I did not."

Cadet Promoted

E. Fred Slater, jr., 3323 Porter street northwest, has been named a corporal in the Cadet Corps at Pennsylvania Military College, Chester, Pa., it was announced yesterday.

Young Slater, a junior at the college, is the son of Lieut. Comdr. Ernest F. Slater, U. S. Marine Corps. The youth previously attended Pennsylvania Preparatory School. He is a member of the baseball team at the college.

Sailors Lured By Communist Girls, Jury Told

Los Angeles, Aug. 16 (U.P.)—Representative Martin Dies, chairman of the House committee investigating un-American activities, charged tonight that a "Communist and Nazi bloc" had plannend an industry-wide strike in Southern California aircraft factries to cripple national defense and aid to embattled England.

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Aug. 16.—Charges that girl members of the Young Communist League were instructed to "provide every possible enjoyment and entertainment" to sailors have been presented to a grand jury investigating communistic activities here. District Attorney Buron Fitts' office has announced.

The announcement revealed what it described as the transcript of testimony before the inquisitorial body of John L. Leech, former Communist leader, and quoted him as saying:

"I do not recall a specific direction on the part of the leadership of the Communist Party where the girls were told to participate in immoral activities, although I know the party does not frown on that. In fact, it favors it.

"We (the Communists) have had a policy of knowing that no revolution in this country could be successful without undermining the morale of the Naval "Various methods were used. We had a policy of having parties in the homes of party members, purely social affairs, where members of the Young Communist League and younger members of the Communist Party would gather and invite the men and boys of the National Guard but particularly the sailors on leave from their ships at Los Angeles harbor.

"Young Communist League girls would gather and mingle with them and go on dates with them and would give them pieces of Communist literature in the guise that they were giving them advice."

The district attorney's office indicated that further portions of Leech's purported testimony before the grand jury would be released as soon as a transcript is made.

Dies Lists 1,200 Bund 'Sympathizers'

Los Angeles, Aug. 16 (U.P.)—Chairman Martin Dies of the House Un-American Activities Committee announced late today he had compiled a list of 1,200 suspected "sympathizers" of the German-American bund, some of them allegedly entrenched in key positions in the aircraft industry.

The Texas Congressman said his committee had subpenaed from the Deutsches Haus the list of persons assertedly in sympathy with the bund.

"We are now checking these names in city directories and through other channels of information," Dies said.

He said his agents had investigated occupations of some of the names and found them to include aircraft workers, oil workers and mechanics.

The Deutsches Haus is a Los Angeles restaurant reputed to be a meeting place of bund members.

Arnold Replies To Gillette On Oil Suits

Denies Assignment To Defense Unit Would Waive Antitrust Law

Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General, told Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, yesterday that turning over a proposed suit against the Nation's major oil companies to the National Defense Commission for study "does not mean a waiver of the antitrust laws."

Replying to a letter in which Gillette demanded "satisfactory reasons" why the Justice Department had not prosecuted the petroleum companies for alleged monopolistic practices, Arnold said that "as a matter of courtesy to the Defense Commission and information to this department the matter was referred for study as to possible effect on national defense." He added:

"Their recommendations will be carefully considered with respect to modifying any of the relief sought in the oil suit, if, as a matter of fact, it appears that the interests of national defense are involved. This does not mean a waiver of the antitrust laws. We anticipate no conflict.

"We are convinced that the oil suit will, in a civil proceeding, settle various issues which, until now have been the subject of numerous criminal cases, all of which the department has won."

The proposed suit was turned over to the Defense Commission a few days before the time unofficially fixed for its filing. Attorney General Jackson and the Defense Commission issued statements simultaneously explaining that the commission wanted to study the suit, which, as prepared, would name 22 major oil companies and about 300 subsidiaries and affiliates, and report on its possible effects.

Jackson said that the commission had not asked or suggested abandonment of the case. He added, however, that no decision on whether the suit would be filed would be made until the commission had reported.

Silver Spring Scout Leaders Plan Camp Site

Steps to acquire a permanent camping site for the seven Boy Scout Troops in the Silver Spring, Md., area will be made this fall, William W. Prentiss, neighborhood commissioner for Montgomery county, announced yesterday.

A meeting of all the scout masters and leaders of the Silver Spring troops has been called for Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the parish hall of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, Silver Spring avenue, to discuss the project.

Home-Town Girl (Betty Baum) Makes Good By Landing Watergate Guest Artist Role

Western High School Graduate Gains Goal Of All D. C. Musicians

Betty Baum, who went to Western High School and decided to take a try in music after graduation, will have tomorrow what probably every Washington musician aspires to—the guest artist role with the National Symphony at the Watergate.

The idea of the environment, the opportunity to play to the stars and before a whopping big audience understandably appeals to her and pleases her because she has worked hard to reach such a stage.

She reminded that a lot of practice lies behind her; hours of pounding out exercises, developing, while possibly more lively hours could have been spent. But when the time came around, the pianist was not like the prophet in his home town. The pianist was honored.

It will be Washington night at the Watergate. Kurt Hetzel, conductor and founder of the Washington Civic Orchestra, will appear as guest director of the symphony.

Following graduation from Western High School, Miss Baum attended the Peabody Conservatory of Music. There, she studied under the Russian pianist, Alexander Sklarevski.

Receiving the teachers' degree from this institution, she continued her training with Josef and Rosina Lhevinne, of the Juilliard School of Music in New York.

Miss Baum resides here at 3930 Edmunds street northwest.

Powell and Loy a Hit in Palace Comedy; Romance of Truck Drivers on Earle Screen

'I Love You Again' Is Hilarious Fun With Ace Cast; Short-Reels Score

"I LOVE YOU AGAIN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Octavus Roy Cohen, adapted to the screen by Charles Lederer, George Oppenheimer and Harry Kurnitz, costarring William Powell and Myrna Loy, with Frank McHugh, Edmund Lowe, Donald Douglas, Nella Walker, Carl "Alfalfa" Switzer, Pierre Watkins, Paul Stanton, Morgan Wallace and Charles Arnt. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke 2d. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At Loew's Palace Theater.

BELL

Based on Roy Octavus Cohen's frivolous fiction with amnesia as its base, tinctured with just a dash of the "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" motif and bearing no relation whatsoever to the "Thin Man" subjects in which they have appeared so frequently, "I Love You Again," affords William Powell and Myrna Loy opportunity to frolic through the maddest farce in which they have been seen on the screen in months on end.

Presented for the first time on a local screen at Loew's Palace Theater yesterday, this utterly ridiculous and continuously provocative item kept a capacity audience whooping and roaring and rolling in the aisles throughout its initial presentation.

"I Love You Again" is no matter calling for detailed plot outline. In cold type, a recapitulation of the nonsensical yarn would sound far less funny than it is up there on the silver sheet. It is Mr. Powell who is the victim of the lapse of memory that has stretched over a period of nine years. Accidentally plunged overboard in an attempted rescue at sea, he reecives a sound wallop on the cranium from a lifeboat oar and suddenly becomes his old original self again—a strikingly sportive contrast to the stuffy teetotaler he had been in the interim. In addition to acquiring a wife of whom he remembers nothing, upon landing, he reverts to type by becoming a "wildcatter" in the Wallingford manner, by promoting a bogus oil deal in a town where he had been a paragon of all the inhibitive virtues. To further this scheme, it is even necessary for him to assume his old post as head of the Boy Ranger movement. In the meantime, his wife has determined upon a divorce and a rival suitor is making himself a worse pest than the original Larry Wilson.

All of this has been rigged up into fast action and the wildest of farce-comedy by all of the hokum that Director Woody S. Van Dyke could lay his retentive memory to. And it is played to a fare-thee-well by a cast joyously gaited to precisely such foolishness.

The greatest comedy burden is borne by William Powell, who gives the role of the man "who certainly kicks amnesia around" everything in his repertoire of tomfoolery. Myrna Loy's assignment is more on the romantic side with rather less chance for comedy effect than usually falls to her lot. Principally aiding and abetting Mr. Powell, in both his deliberate and subconscious chicanery, is Frank McHugh, in the "fattest" part he has had in recent times. Edmund Lowe, returning to important roles after a long absence and looking a trifle older than once he did, is the archconspirator in the oil deal, whose dreams of easy plunder are undone by Miss Loy's recurring love. There are many more players in the cast, but they do not greatly matter one way or the other. The four leads are enough to knock any audience out of their pews.

The short-reel supplementaries of the new bill at the Palace also are something an audience will not long remember, or care about, in the light of the fetaure's explosive humor. "Suva, Pride of Fiji," is one of M-G-M's better Traveltalks, in color, and the cartoon comedy, also in color, is "The Bookworm Turns." The newsreel is a compiete and informative issue, but "I Love You Again" is what really counts—but way up in the high figures!

So They Make the Title Come True

WILLIAM POWELL AND MYRNA LOY
as they appear in the eminently appropriate "fade-out" of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "I Love You Again," which yesterday inaugurated its first Washington engagement on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Frank McHugh and Edmund Lowe lead the supporting cast in this hilarious farce of amnesia and interrupted romance

'South of Pago Pago' Brings Tropic Seas to the Capitol

By Richard L. Coe

"SOUTH OF PAGO PAGO." United Artists-Edward Small picturization of a screen play by George Bruce and Kenneth Gamet, costarring Jon Hall, Victor McLaglen and Frances Farmer, with Olympe Bradna, Gene Lockhart, Douglas Dumbrille, Francis Ford, Ben Weldon, Abner Biberman, Pedro De Cordoba and Rudy Robles. Directed by Alfred E. Green. Previewed Tuesday afternoon, August 13. At the Capitol Theater.

"Do you want me?" sighs saronged Frances Farmer to be-trunked Jon Hall as they recline innocently on one of nature's grassy hillocks in the South Seas. Then, after Capitol Theater ushers have had time to pour buckets of water on patrons of "South of Pago Pago," who had fainted away from the sheer ecstasy of it all, Miss Farmer finishes her question: "To go back to the Island?" Just like that, new sentence and all.

Which gives you an idea that possibly the Capitol's new film is filled with many such bon-mots. It is if you look for them: it isn't if you left your double-entendre indicator at home. There's nothing on the surface to suggest this is anything but another tack of the "East Meets West" tradition with all the cliches of South Sea melodrama except a hurricane, typhoon, tornado or Technicolor. But lacking Bob Hope to mutter irreverencies throughout, players, director and script writers have spiced Sadie Thompson's one-time haunts with some rather unbelievable lines.

Jon Hall In Lead

Of course, maybe we're wrong and we shouldn't chuckle at Miss Farmer's continued fascination with the idea of being an ostrich and getting away from it all by putting her head in the sand. That's an idea she picked up from a dying white man played in a "Passing-of-the-Third-Floor-Back" mood by Gene Lockhart. Maybe it isn't a bit funny when Miss Farmer reports back from her honeymoon to Pearl-Thief Victor McLaglen that "I've decided to close up the office." Perhaps the way a grass shade plunks down as a period to a Frances Farmer soliloquy is too wheezy a device to be laughed at. And when the native chief meets her for the first time and proclaims "Your skin is white like a cloud; your hair golden like the dawn," maybe he really means it.

There is, to be sure, real melodrama in "South of Pago Pago," lots of it. Miss Farmer plays a tarnished floozie of Singapore's cafe society, McLaglen, one of her more promising admirers. They bamboozle a wretched little man to learn the location of a great pearl island, Manoa, by name. They please the natives with traditional, harmless little objects, then get them to dive, as only those natives can, for the precious oysters. Crown prince of the island, Jon Hall, finds Miss Farmer pleasing, speaks her language, marries her, jilting pretty Olympe Bradna, who previously "had played at love with him," the quotes being Miss Bradna's. When McLaglen gets the boys to drinking and diving beyond their endurance, all hell breaks loose.

Hall, even more stalwart than in "Hurricane," has a peach of a fight with McLaglen for the finale and all the other players are evil, pretty, etc., as their roles suggest. Viewed by a relaxed spirit, "South of Pago Pago" is a minor epic of ingenuous innocence.

Short, Snappy Stage Revue

There's a generous dash of novelty on the Capitol stage this week, with one ambitious production number that would do credit to any theater. "All Points West," it's called, and is a monologue of a railway terminal announcer set to music by Rogers and Hart. Fague Springman does it full justice with a voice and ability to use it that is rare for young vaudevillians. Yesterday's first house gave the turn a socko hand, thanks to Springman's first-rate singing and some effective staging.

Back on the Capitol stage is Jack Durant, whose stock of imitations and gags hasn't altered much, although, come to think of it, he did have one new story. It is fine to have a comic the house likes to laugh at, but the repeaters would please their old friends if they'd alter things just for the surprise.

Also familiar to Capitol audiences are the Jack Cole Dancers, two maids and a man, whose rhythm is exciting and whose motion is striking. This trip they offer an East Indian dance and join the Rhythm Rockets for a finale of La Conga. Ken Harvey's guitaring is supplemented by his introduction of a "vibralectric," a novelty that also got a big hand from a large house. All in all, this stage revue's brevity (45 minutes) makes for exceptional F street dash. Sam Jack Kaufman starts things off by conducting the "Bridal Rose" overture.

Star-Studded Cast Add Brisk Comedy To Dramatic Film; Stellar Stage Revue

"THEY DRIVE BY NIGHT." Warner Brothers picturization of a novel by A. I. Bezzerides, adapted to the screen by Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay, featuring George Raft, Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino and Humphrey Bogart, with Gale Page, Alan Hale, Roscoe Karns, John Litel, George Tobias, Charles Halton, Paul Hurst, Joyce Compton and many others. Directed by Raoul Walsh. Previewed Monday, August 12. At the Earle Theater.

In "They Drive by Night," the new screen feature at the Earle, we are introduced to the tempestuous —and at times highly amusing— scramble for existence pursued by the case-hardened gentlemen who bowl the heavy freight trucks over the country's principal automobile thoroughfares. The initial action is in a strictly serio-comic vein, but as events progress the fable takes on a tragic note that ends in one of the most vivid of the courtroom scenes that have lately come to view. By and large, this high-pressure Warner Brothers production is less on the side of morbidity and depression than that of happy-go-lucky gayety in the face of what would be adversity to a race less hardy than the truckers.

The four pivotal characters in the comedy-drama are Joe and Paul Fabrini, brothers trying to eke out an existence against non-paying bosses, private loads and the finance companies; Cassie Hartley, a lunch-counter waitress, who engages Joe's attention, and Lana Carlson, wife of the former "road slob" who wangles his way into control of his own company and makes the racket pay. Lana sets her tricky chapeau for Joe, murders her husband to clear the way for a dubious "romance" and loses her reason as the penalty for her impulsiveness.

That is only the gist of the tale. It is made entertaining beyond the measure of most plays that sound so sordid by the cleverness of its playing, the skill of its writing and, above all, by the superlative performance of Ida Lupino, in the character of Lana. The film loses nothing from the presence of Ann Sheridan in the cast as Cassie, whose role is exactly the pungent sort of thing she does best.

Important as the feminine principals are in the action, it is to the rough-and-ready men that the picture owes its greatest debt. George Raft and Humphrey Bogart are assigned to the roles of the struggling brothers and they are surrounded by such adepts at rugged comedy and drama as Roscoe Karns, Alan Hale, John Litel, Paul Hurst, George Tobias and a long list of others. In the hands of these expert players, "They Drive by Night" presents no dull moments.

The same thing may be said of the stage bill, rather longer and more diverse than usual. Jimmy Rae, an unusual sort of acrobatic, dancing comedian; Eddie White, the well-known story-teller and singer of parodies; those kazoo experts, "The Music Masters," who make themselves sound like bands and orchestras by sheer versatility of the vocal cords; Ames and Arno, a mixed duo of knockabout funsters, and the old Washington favorite, Gene Austin, leave no "dead spots" on the living program, either. They are, of course, reinforced by the Roxyettes, in a variety of their simpler routines—by which we mean that nobody gets her neck broken. Gene Austin, in better voice than he has been for several visits to the same stage, is assisted by the Sherrell Sisters in a cycle of his newest and some of his oldest hits.

Eileen Ritter's "Sing-a-Song-with-Mike" interlude—with free recordings still being passed out as prizes to the volunteer soloists—and an especially complete and interesting camera record of the prime news events of the week round out a program that moves rapidly and registers resoundingly.

(FIBBER McGEE, of radio fame, is pinch-hitting today for Leonard Lyons, who is on vacation.)

I WAS JUST saying to Molly the other day that I sure would like a chance to get out my eyeshade and blue pencil and settle down to a little newspaper business again, when first thing I knew here was an invitation to write Leonard Lyons' column while he was on vacation.

THE FIBBER

THIS ISN'T my first time at reporting—not by a long shot. I was the fellow that disclosed the evidence that they was giving hollow scoops of ice cream in cones on Fair day back five years ago. Old Scoops McGee I was known as in those days. The scrappiest scribe who ever scuttled a scruple to scrutinize a scoundrel scouting a scrub team scrimmage.

AND THEM WAS THE DAYS of real newspaper men. Why, I remember when I was covering the city hall I worked for ten days on a case without so much as leaving once for lunch. That was a hard case. Yes, sir, hard cide-er-er case.

THEN there was the time Mrs. Uppington's ice box caught on fire. The boss had been yelling for more of those "man bites dog" stories and where was my nose for news and stuff, and I got sore and told him I'd get him a story that would knock his eye out, if I had to make it happen myself. Molly was having a tea party that afternoon for the Wistful Vista Sewing Circle, so I figured Abigail would be out of her house most of the day.

I SNUCK in soon as she was gone and rubbed the insulation off the wires in the motor like I'd read in a book, poured oil on them and before I knew it I had the best gol-darn smoke screen pouring out of the ice box you ever seen. I ran back to the corner newspaper office before the call came for the fire department so the boss would send me out on the story, and sure enough I got there with the fire hose.

We had the fire out in no time and then they started figuring out how it could of happened. The fire chief got out a book on mechanics and blowing out fuses and stuff, and by the time I could see he had it figured out, I was back to the office and had my story written and in front of the city editor.

Boy, that was a pip of a yarn. Even the city ed said so, and I was all set to buy Molly a new washing machine with my raise when in stalked the fire chief.

"You Fibber McGee?" says he.

"Yup," says I kinda laughing like.

"This your knife?" says he.

"Lessee, there," says I, looking good at the knife. "Well, I think it is, yup; hold on there, what you want to know for; where'd you find it?" says I, suspicious like.

"Well, Mr. McGee," says he, "that ice box didn't catch fire by accident. Somebody scraped the insulation off those wires, and the knife that did it was this here one. Come along, McGee, you've got some explainin' to do."

I TOLD IT ALL to Molly when she came down to bail me out, and I just laughed and laughed when I remembered all that smoke coming out of the ice box, but all she said, was "Tain't funny, McGee."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 16 (INS).—The Paramount crowd is moving heaven and earth to persuade Warners to lend them Brenda Marshall for "I Wanted Wings." There is a double reason back of this urgent request for Brenda's services. First, because all the world loves a lover and they well know that the combination of Brenda and Bill Holden will spell box-office. Certainly Bill could really make love to the girl he expects to marry.

PARSONS

The Walt Disney-Robert Benchley contract that Parsons, jr., prophesied a few months ago, is now a fact and Bob starts at the Disney Studio October 7 in "The Reluctant Dragon." What a combination! Walt and Bob—both, of whom know their comedies and their audiences so well, Benchley will be the first flesh and blood actor in a Disney fantasy and you'll see him as the famous Benchley himself.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Mary Lou Dix-Al Newman romance is on again hot and heavy. Perhaps it means marriage. Their friends are urging it; give credit where credit is due. It was Ma Lane who reunited Rosemary and Buddy Westmore after a battle that lasted a week; Kay Feltus is the house guest of Bob Preston's mother at Laguna Beach; Ken Murray, that handsome man about town, escorting Betty Grable to "The Great Profile;" the handsome gent who was so attentive to pretty Susan Hayward at the preview was George Montgomery. Susie was the prettiest girl at the preview and also at Ciro's, where she and George went later.

Artie Shaw and Frances Neal are getting to be a habit; Rita Johnson and Walter Brooks, a new twosome at the Beverly Tropics; Simone Simon and Gene Towne lunching tete-a-tete at the RKO commissary; Helen Gilbert is now concentrating on Billy Marshall; Gloria Dickson goes into the hospital for a major operation; Ann Sheridan leaves for Honolulu as soon as she finishes "Honeymoon for Three," her current opus; Wayne Morris has gone to Mexico to forget his matrimonial troubles and his estranged bride.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

'Snow White' and Her Dwarfs Return to Pack the 'Met'

The year's most enchanting picture has opened a week's engagement at the Metropolitan. Which year? Oh, any year. Which picture? "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," dopey.

And speaking of Dopey, who still doesn't talk because he hasn't tried to, there are also Sneezy, Grumpy, Doc, Sleepy, Happy and Bashful in this first feature-length Disney. There's a score that has "Whistle While You Work," "Some Day My Love Will Come Along" and "Hi-Ho, Hi-Ho, As Off to Work We Go." So, before we go further off the deep end on this one, we'll remind you that the Metropolitan is now offering a Walt Disney Festival, in which Snow White and her friends share the screen with "Ferdinand the Bull," "The Ugly Duckling," the "Three Little Pigs" in "The Practical Pig" and "Donald's Lucky Day." It's a feast so rare that this dawn-cracker practically had to disguise himself as a child to pry into the Met.

What's more, but of course you know this already, too, there's no better escape on earth than a dose of Disney. If "Snow White" was a joy in December, 1937, after the Panay incident, it's sheer ecstasy right now. And the amazing thing about "Snow White" is that it's even better than you remember.

You may have forgotten, for instance, the details of a housecleaning when the furry and feathered folk go about it. You may not recall how that persistent turtle gets downstairs. You surely haven't forgotten that dawn when Snow White discovered those frightening eyes to belong to her happiest friends but you couldn't possibly recall all the rabbits, squirrels and birds. And all over again, you'll fall in love with Dopey.

And something else that will strike you before you pull yourself away from the Met is the completeness with which Disney dwarfs all other cartoonists. There is literally no comparison. For when he has done a thing it is so well done that attempts made to follow up his ideas are hopelessly boring and outdated.

Another thought that will occur to you is "Snow White's" superiority over the still-excellent "Pinocchio." The two years between the films saw a great step forward in the color process, but the delicate tints of "Snow White" are still fresh enough, sharp enough to amaze the historian of Technicolor. The wicked queen's poisoned apple gleams in its vivid red. Bashful blushes with rare realism and Snow White is still the fairest in the land.

So, if your luck's with you and you do manage to get a seat at the Metropolitan, you'll be writing the management anyway to keep it on world without end, amen. R. L. C.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Aug. 16.

Bette Davis gave one of her most exciting performances in "The Letter," and when I said to her just before she left for Eastern vacation, "The title of your first picture with George Arliss, 'The Man Who Played God,' was rather prophetic, wasn't it?"—she said, "You know, Hedda, no one has ever put the fear of God in me as he did. Not that he wasn't wonderful, and, oh, so helpful, but he had that intent gaze that seemed to bore through you like a gimlet, and the hole was filled with only his thoughts. But I learned a lot through that and have used his

Italian Casualties Are Heavy In Advance Toward Berbera

Fascists Battle Native Somalis In Mountain Passes

By Larry Allen,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 16.—Italian armored divisions drove their three-pronged attack deeper into British Somaliland today, advancing to within 38 miles of Berbera, the capital.

Fighting was furious in the mountain passes southeast and southwest of Berbera and along the coastline of the Gulf of Aden south from Zeila, which already is in Fascist hands, with Britain's native Somali troops inflicting heavy casualties.

The Italian attacking force was believed to be considerably superior numerically.

British headquarters reported "nothing important" over other African warfronts. There were patrol encounters in Kenya, with slight Italian casualties.

The British and Italian air forces traded bombs today from the Suez to Somaliland amid indications that British forces fighting on the southern shores of the Gulf of Aden might have to fall back, lacking reinforcements, on Berbera, their Somali capital and chief port.

The Italians bombed Alexandria anew overnight in an attempt to smash the British fleet concentration there, but failed to hit any warships.

Official British announcements detailed air raids on Italian objectives from Libya to the coastal and inland roads of Somaliland, where the Italian mechanized columns are fighting their way toward Berbera.

Although the raids in British Somaliland were stated to have been "successful," British spokesmen said the military situation there was "rather critical" and the British, now defending heights around Berbera, may be forced to retire to the town itself.

These sources admitted that the British defenders of Berbera were badly outnumbered, faced by two Italian divisions, but declared that "there must be limits to reinforcements sent to Somaliland, limits imposed by the general strategic situation."

The battle for Berbera was understood to be still in progress, with Italian columns advancing on the city, from the west along the coast and from the south through the Jugargan Pass region. Yesterday it was admitted that British units holding the latter position had been compelled to fall back and that Italian progress had been "more rapid than had been expected."

and the locks of the doors that were shut were completely smashed. The scullery door was blown off and all the windows were blown out."

Two men were killed in a road where a bomb made a big crater.

In another place, a 5-year-old girl in a shelter was wounded in the chest and leg by a bomb splinter which penetrated the back of the shelter.

One house which was badly damaged was also damaged by a bomb in the World War. (Apparently in one of the Zeppelin raids of that period.)

A mother who threw herself over her child in the street escaped injury, but another who tried the same tactic was wounded by a bomb splinter.

One suburb alone was struck by 30 to 40 bombs.

Girls in a factory near where a bomb burst rushed outside. They said machine-gun bullets spattered about them when they reached the street.

Fragments of bicycles and baby carriages littered one street.

Some parts of the bombed area were roped off and newspapermen and public barred.

One man pointing up a street said: "Go up and take a look there and you'll know why I hope I'm called up for the R. A. F. next week.

"They killed my nephew—a fine 19-year-old lad. He was just walking across the street to see a friend when a bomb hit the friend's house killing the friend and wife, too."

Tonight gas and water works demolition squads worked on repairs and cleared debris. People without other accommodation shoveled plaster and broken glass out of their blasted homes.

their very existence is in the balance.

But the mass German attack, unprecedented in all history, is designed to prove that "no power on earth can stop the Nazi air force," declared German sources.

Destroyer Reported Sunk

A British destroyed was reported sunk by air bombs at Portsmouth. Heavy damage was said to have been inflicted on Kent airdromes and coastal barrage balloons.

Violent air battles raged over the heart of London, while the thunder of cannon reverberated in the mighty city that reechoed with the incessant eerie shrill of air raid sirens.

Nazi squadrons broke through the British defense zone to the south, the Germans said, and burst into the iron ring of London with great blows at airports, arsenals, arms factories and industrial plants.

"Bomb hits, fires, bomb craters, destroyed houses, planes, tremendous detonations and high columns of fires show the work of the German bombers," declared DNB, in a proud running description.

"There is air alarm after air alarm, the howl of sirens and the thunder of cannon in London.

Last Badge of Heroism

"Extensive fighting is in progress. The British are exerting every effort to halt the German attack. One recognizes clearly in the English defense that they know everything is at stake—their very existence.

"Tenaciously the English and Germans tie into one another until one plane or the other shoots off to destruction. A trail of smoke is the last badge of a heroism that was

"Here and there, billowing parachutes and the yellow puffs from antiaircraft explosions float through the air.

"On earth, the direct hits, the bomb craters and the number of planes shot down appear to be immense.

"German scouts, observing from a great height, are giving reports on developments."

The squalid Cockney section, a vast beehive of docks, sprawling warehouses, factories and arsenals, lay under a pall of smoke, the raiders reported.

Center of London "Spared"

Explosions plumed up from Barkin gand Purfleet, crowded East End industrial suburbs, said DNB. Both are on the north bank of the Thames, some 8 miles from Charing Cross. (Purfleet has been the site of a powder magazine in the past; Barking is barely 2½ miles from the great Royal Albert Docks. The Royal Arsenal at Woolwich is just across the river.)

The raiders met a hot fight from British fighter planes over both the Channel coast and over London, but a late report said two German fighter squadrons had "cleared the air" over London. Three squadrons of bombers, the report continued, flew on west of London and attacked other objectives there.

Authorized sources said the raiders' objectives were outlying "arsenals, warehouses and refrigerating plants" and asserted the center of London would be spared.

"Not a Large-Scale Attack"

Dienst aus Deutschland, authoritative German commentary, quoted a German high command source tonight to the effect that only about 200 bombers were sent to England Thursday under protection of 320 Messerschmitt fighter and destroyer planes:

"This is not a large-scale attack, no matter what the effects on England may be," said Dienst aus Deutschland. "It is a strong armed reconnaissance force."

(An Associated Press staff man at Dover today counted that many bombers in several flights, and British estimates generally said that at least 1,000 and possibly three times that many German planes were engaged yesterday.)

Accounts of Friday's raid told of "great destruction to London's harbor zone" and said airports all around the city suffered heavily; that the Enfield powder plant in the outskirts was attacked and other armament and powder plants north of London bombed.

Other bombers, taking advantage of the fight over London, bombed the airports at Rochester and Maidstone, which were lightly defended, the agency reported.

Like Reporting Horse Race

Later, the formation which penetrated west of London returned to report that it had started big fires in hangars and barracks of air fields there.

As if it were reporting a classic horse race, D. N. B. issued its account of this "special action" beginning with the hour—6:30 p. m. (11:30 a. m., Eastern standard time) that the raiders reached the English Channel.

"The first British interceptors are already sighted," the agency relayed.

Then:

"The special German air force unit is over harbor installations in the Thames . . . chasers are already engaged in aerial combat . . . now and then a Spitfire or Hurricane fighter swoops down . . . the German pilots make unswervingly for their objectives . . .

"Machine-gunners in the German planes covering the flanks fire at the approaching enemy interceptors and keep them off. . . . British antiaircraft fire is avoided. . . . The shells burst far behind the German machines. . . .

"Large fires have broken out on either side of the Thames. . . . Everywhere smoke is arising. . . . Hits and bomb craters are visible. . . . The wind is driving a black veil across the slums of the London East End. . . . The German planes have dropped their deadly loads with the utmost precision. . . ."

Tell of Successes at Sea

There also was a great attack on harbor and air facilities at Chatham, a ship repair yard on the lower Thames, DNB asserted. It described great conflagrations in docks, shipyards and coaling stations, barracks seen to collapse and damage to workshops.

On the sea, the Germans said their levelled-antiaircraft artillery had driven British patrol boats away from the French Channel port of Cap Gris Nez, scoring several hits. A German submarine reported that it had sunk two armed British merchant ships totaling 14,000 tons.

President Reviews Guard Today

First Division and the three commanders. Following lunch, he will continue his inspection, ending with the Twenty-eighth (Pennsylvania) at Lisbon.

At 2:10 p. m. all units of the First Army will take part in an air review in the Presidents honor. About 125 planes will meet at the rendezvous over Canton and fly in review past a knoll south of Potsdam.

After completing his review, Mr. Roosevelt will be taken to Ogdensburg, where Col. Francis B. Wilby, chief of staff of the First Army, will point out the technical phases on a map in front of the Ogdensburg Free Academy of the huge maneuvers beginning Monday. Aerial tactics will be explained on another map by Brig. Gen. James E. Chaney, chief of the air defense command. He will give a 15-minute interview to correspondents afterward and will spend the night here on the Presidential car.

Sunday Mr. Roosevelt will attend religious services in the maneuver area before leaving for his summer home at Hyde Park. He is expected to make an informal address to troops of the First Division tomorrow.

Pulled in from their battle at 10 a. m., today, the 90,000 troops spent this afternoon washing clothing, polishing arms and furbishing trucks, tractors, tanks and the big guns for the review tomorrow. In some sections corps exercises, which threw division against division and were to have continued until tomorrow noon, had developed important situations.

By a strategem old as war itself, the Twenty-ninth early this morning drove through the clinging mists and split the twenty-eighth wide open, capturing a brigade intact and hurling the Pennsylvanians back beyond their railhead at Lisbon and it's important lateral railway. In doing that, the Twenty-ninth pulled itself out of what appeared late last night to be something of a hole.

Last night at 6:30, Gen. Reckord issued orders for a dawn attack against the Twenty-eighth's right wing, where a seven-mile gap lay between the Pennsylvanians and the St. Lawrence River. Shortly thereafter, strong patrols from the Twenty-eighth began filtering through the lines of the Twenty-ninth on its right, raising havoc in the rear and calling attention to that flank. This led Reckord to believe his envelopment next morning was suspected by the Twenty-eighth's aggressive commander, Maj. Gen. Edward Martin.

Nassau to Give Windsors Warm Welcome Today

will be the duchess for whose love he cast aside his crown.

Nassau now is in the grip of a tropical heat wave. If the Duke and Duchess are in a mood to make friends and influence people on arrival, they could begin in no more favorable spot than the Bahama Trust Co.—the only air-conditioned building in town. There's room there for a couple of extra chairs and the Duchess' portable sewing machine.

If the duchess can keep her powder dry in this climate she will have worked a miracle. The symbol of utter futility in these parts is a woman adjusting her make-up.

How the former Wallis Warfield will ever be able to keep that best-dressed look in these parts has me worried. Make-up does a complete vanishing act within five minutes after application. Woman's crowning glory folds up into a limp hank. And in this climate, both punctuality and perspiration are the prerogative of princes.

What the well-dressed woman wears in Nassau is as little as possible to keep within the bounds of the law and only half of that in private.

Cheap and none-too-flattering cromo-likenesses of the duke and duchess have been placed in a number of shop windows along Bay street. My favorite has his royal highness clothed in a Kelly green suit the like of which has never even been seen along New York's Third avenue.

A fair percentage of American flags—either out of deference to the duchess or the tourist trade—are intertwined with the Union Jack in the street decorations.

The Romeo and Juliet of contemporary history are arriving in Nassau in time to witness the romantic glories of a full tropic moon above the island which floats in the scent of night-blooming jasmine after dusk. The moonlight is so white, clear and limpid that one can read a newspaper by it, although only a fool or a confirmed misogynist would do so.

Endeavorers' Topic

"Understanding the Jew and His Problems" wil l be the theme for the Christian Endeavor Society meeting at Central Presbyterian Church at 7 p. m. tomorrow, when a speaker from the Jewish Community Center will be heard. Dagmar Turner will be leader of the program.

Nazi Reporters Tell of Raids Over England

Writers Describe Grim Battle in Sky, Dive Bombings Near London

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 16. (via radio).—A German flying reporter who participated in today's attack on the London area said tonight in his story of the raid that he had "the proud feeling that hundreds, perhaps even thousands, of our comrades had attacked . . . to show the British that Germany does not allow one to joke with it."

(The authoritative British press association sardonically asked the German government yesterday why it was that Hitler was not in London. August 15, the association said, was the day appointed for England's fall.)

The reporter's story in part:

". . . We had orders to attack British aircraft works west of London. Our planes carried more than 50,000 kilograms (more than 100,000 pounds) of high explosives up to a height of 4,000 meters (more than 12,00 feet).

Dived on Airdrome

". . . We saw the typical triangle of railway tracks of a certain British town and below us there was a certain British airdrome which was especially noticeable by the motorcar racing track which encircled it.

". . . Our bomb-aiming devices were adjusted. The red light glowed on the dash. Five seconds later our machine dived. It was a sudden jerk; for a moment one seemed to lose consciousness. I saw how we aproached the earth, . . . at terrific speed. The nose of the aeroplane was aimed at a long row of assembly workshops.

". . . Our bombs had been released and the machine was free. We looked back and saw hits. White smoked poured from the riddled roofs of the workshops. Fire and detonations were clearly noticeable . . . Enemy chasers had come too late. We got rid of them."

Flew Over Balloons

Hans Hirsch, another flier-reporter who as a part of the regular armed forces flew over England and then returned to Nazi territory had this to say in a dispatch datelined somewhere in North France:

"Five minutes ago I returned from a flight against the enemy. Rochester, an airfield southeast of London, was our goal.

"Under us like thick black sausages the first (British) balloon barrages appear. My fingers itch to be able to shoot one down but I have other tasks—perhaps on the way back.

"Canterbury is beneath us. Now the goal lies just beneath us just as the pictures brought back by observers show it. The first bombs fell. Our 'eggs' curve downward and create a mighty cloud of smoke, gigantic flashes of flame. Pobjoy Air Motors Aircraft, Ltd.—they existed once, too!

Hurricanes Open Fire

"The first Hurricanes (British fighters) appear. They begin shooting afar, from all barrels to make hits. It is like hell has broken loose and banged and crashed in the cockpit. Wood and glass splinters fly about among us.

"The first pilot is wounded in the thigh—cleanly through. Then our left motor fails. Then the radioman pulls the machine gun around and gives a spurt over at the pursuit ship that is trying to pull over us. He falls flaming into the Channel. It didn't worry us much that we had to make an emergency landing on this side of the Channel."

those Britons who are now experiencing an aerial blitzkrieg at first hand, it was some comfort to know that the bombers of this war were not all flying one way.

[A New York Times dispatch from Berlin said antiaircraft batteries on the outskirts of the German capital were in action tonight, but indicated there was no alarm in the city.

[Munich, however, had a half-hour alarm late tonight and four explosions "like the sound of bombs" were heard, the United Press reported.]

[An Associated Press Zurich dispatch said Switzerland experienced its third air raid alarm in four days late tonight. It was belived that the alarm again was due to planes flying toward Italy, although no communique was issued.

[Switzerland already has protested to Britain against flights over Swiss territory in bombing raids aimed at Italy.]

Krupp Works Raided

While three British squadrons were adding considerable damage to what they had already done to the Fiat and the Caproni works Tuesday night, other R. A. F. units were bombing the Krupp armament works at Essen, and nosing through low clouds to score direct hits on German oil plants and refineries at Gelsenkirchen, and Reisholz.

The British report the loss of three aircraft last night on their long, hazardous excursions. The pilots who collectively unloaded 17 tons of bombs and hundreds of incendiaries on the Lunen munition works say they encountered a fierce ground fire, searchlights and a balloon barrage. But the official communique does not mention any clash with German night flying fighters.

This is regarded as remarkable, as the raid on Gelsenkirchen lasted nearly two hours and one crew alone stayed long enough to score eight direct hits and count 25 fires. Moreover other bombers passed over German-occupied airfields en route to Chartres, France, where hangars were bombed, also to Luzzu Warden in northern Holland.

The railway yards at Hamm, Germany, got their fiftieth visit.

2 Killed, 5 Hurt in Italy

Rome, Aug. 16.—British bombers raided northern Italy early this morning for the second time in three days and dropped a number of bombs in "several places," according to the Italian communique which stated that two people were killed and five injured. Scant material damage, it was said, was done.

Injured in Croydon Bombing information dealing with the London raid was allowed to be transmitted by the censor.)

The air ministry reported that in air attacks all over Britain the Nazis used as many as 150 planes in individual raids and said the day's biggest success was that of a single British Hurricane squadron in shooting down 11 Junkers bombers.

Entire Squadron Destroyed

As to Thursday's 30-plane German assaults upon South London's Croydon Airdrome, the ministry remarked:

"Not a single one of the enemy formation which attacked Croydon yesterday returned to tell the tale."

Fighter planes were not alone in the struggle: The hoarse bellow of "archies"—antiaircraft guns—filled the skies.

From the far-scattered wreckage bodies were being brought forth tonight.

The invading Nazis struck at London in two big flying columns.

The first was split by the defending British and part of that wave was turned back before reaching the city's outskirts. The remaining bombers, racing above the Thames Estuary, bombed it on both sides—hitting both the Tilbury Docks and the Northfleet section across the estuary, the site of big cement works 13 miles from London.

Here an undetermined number of dead was left.

The German column sped on then around the southeast of the city but dropped no bombs, said the Air Ministry.

Factory Burned Down

Later, fresh Nazi squadrons roared up the estuary, loosing bombs in the southwestern suburbs.

The approach of the raiding bombers—an approach which, because of censorship, could not be told for five hours—was stealthy. They came at a high altitude, too high to be seen at first.

The first wave—only part of which reached the city—had crossed the southeast coast several hundred strong. Those able to break through and reach the London outskirts appeared to be avoiding the heart of the metropolitan area. Gunfire was heard in the suburbs across the city toward the western edge, and the boom of heavier explosives came from distant regions.

Many Londoners stood on their rooftops in an unsuccessful effort to see the action.

Attacks Widespread

Aside from the metropolitan area, the raiding Nazis sprayed Britain with explosives from Scotland to the south coast of England and from Wales on the west to the east coast.

They struck again and again at industrial areas, shipping, airdromes—at every point of British resistance in what seemed an obvious effort to break Britain from the air in a plan of strategy which if successful would avoid the great risk of trying an invasion across the English Channel.

It was the sixth successive day of mass raids over England—raids that every day had grown in ferocity—and by mid-afternoon it already had far outdone Thursday's attack, the biggest in history.

It was, as Thursday, an engagement so big as to be difficult to encompass: At one southeastern town alone, at one time, 400 German raiders were counted as they swept across the coastal frontier. The count was lost there; they came on and on after that.

London already had been once under fire. Stuka dive-bombers poured explosives Thursday on the Croydon airdrome and in nearby industrial and residential areas.

R. A. F. Finds Comfort

The number of civilian dead was known only to be growing; there was no comprehensive count available and none in prospect.

But the Royal Air Force took comfort in the knowledge that the acknowledgedly numerically superior air power of the invader was suffering heavily, too.

A dispatch here, another there—they were all brief and left much to be known, but they told of casualties among men and women who never were combatants in this strangest of all the invasions ever attempted in the long march of Britain's centuries.

Factories were smashed; homes burst apart under the falling bombs.

These isolated incidents illustrate a story that could not be told in entirety.

In a west coast town a board school suddenly crumbled; a boy was dug out, dead; others were missing.

Crushed Under Falling Bomber

In the southeast, a householder taking the air in his suburban garden was smashed to death under a falling German bomber.

In the Midlands, anxious men and women hurried to a home-made shelter. It was not a good shelter: A single bomb tore it asunder and several—no one knew how many—died there.

In the same town, two elderly women would go to no shelter. A bomb fell on their house; one died; the other may not live.

In the working class section of a southeastern town, bombs fell in a school playground and a single residence rocked violently and then settled in a mass of splinters. People—nobody knew how many—weer trapped in that house—obscure and nameless victims.

Adm. Courtney New Head of Naval Examining Board

Rear Admiral Charles E. Courtney, until recently commander of the European squadron, yesterday was appointed president of the Naval Examining Board here.

He will relieve Rear Admiral John Downes, who goes to Chicago as commandant of the Ninth Naval District and the Great Lakes Training Station. Rear Admiral William C. Watts, present commandant at Chicago, who is ill, will retire.

Admiral Courtney was relieved as commander of the European squadron in June. He has been serving with the General Board since his return.

John V. Miller Dies; Ex-Edison, Inc., Officer

Chautauqua, N. Y., Aug. 16 (AP).—John V. Miller, 66, South Orange, N. J., formerly an officer of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., died today at his summer home after a two-year illness.

Miller, son of Lewis Miller, cofounder of the Chautauqua Institution, is survived by his widow, a daughter, Nancy, and a son, Stewart.

HopkinsLeaves to Spend Birthday With Daughter

Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins left for Chicago last night to spend his fiftieth birthday today with his daughter, Diana. The close adviser of President Roosevelt, who has been living at the White House, planned to return to his desk early next week.

32 Battleships Hit, Nazis Say; British Had 15

Tally Based on Reich Reports Gives English 17 They Never Had

Copyright by New York Times

London, Aug. 16.—Admiralty officials adding up of German claims of damage inflicted on the royal navy and the merchant fleet found today Berlin has announced the sinking or damaging of 17 more battleships than the British possessed at the outbreak of the war.

Analyzing the claims made in official German communiques—these do not include claims made by the German radio and news services—the British found that the Germans claim to have sunk or seriously damaged 32 battleships. When the war started the official strength was 15, leaving Britain with 17 sunken battleships she never had. The British say they have lost one.

Other categories in the admiralty analysis showed the following:

	German Claims Sept. 3, 1939	British Strength	British Losses
Aircraft carriers ..	10	7	2
Cruisers ...	83	62	3
Destroyers.	92	185	28
Submarines	52	58	13

The British claim that they have announced every loss of a fighting ship soon after it occurred. They have also announced some cases of damage, though for obvious reasons, they do not always report damage, particularly in cases when inevitable collisions occur between destroyers convoying at night without lights.

The British, of course, increased their strength as it was known at the start of the war considerably though how much is a secret. For instance, there were five British battleships nearing completion when the war started. No matter how much the British building program has been speeded up, it would not seem that they have been able to build enough ships to justify the German claims as contained in the admiralty analysis.

As regards to merchant shipping, British, Allied and neutral, British announcements as they have come out week by week ,total 2,514,900 tons: the German claims added up today to 5,078,038 tons sunk, the admiralty says.

Blast Kills Five At Plant Making T.N.T. for British

Joplin, Mo., Aug. 16 (AP).—Five men were killed today in an explosion which wrecked a unit of the Atlas powder plant 6 miles east of Joplin.

At Kansas City Dwight Brantley, chief of the area office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said his agents "have been informed of the explosion, but unless there is evidence of sabotage we will not investigate." He said he had no information at the moment indicating suspicion of sabotage.

The plant, which employs approximately 400 men and is one of three powder plants in this vicinity, has been producing nearly 2,000,000 pounds of T.N.T. monthly. Over half of the production is being purchased by British agents, officials said.

Approval of Child Ship Bill Lauded

Mrs. Harold T. Pulsifer, cochairman of the American Women's Committee for Mercy Ships for European Children, yesterday voiced the gratification of her organization for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's unanimous approval of the Glass bill.

"Apart from the strong feeling of the women of the United States that children should be spared . . . we are convinced that the entire country will echo with grateful hearts the decision of Congress," Mrs. Pulsifer said.

Reasons For Delay

Senator Gillette, of Iowa, has written Assistant Attorney General Arnold demanding to know why the Department of Justice has delayed bringing suit against the country's major oil companies. The answer to the Senator's indignant inquiry can be found in a recent statement by Attorney General Jackson. The contemplated suit has been held up pending study of its effect upon the defense program.

While Mr. Jackson was noncommittal, he was evidently prepared to admit that a comprehensive suit against the oil companies might affect the defense program adversely. Indeed, the mere fact that he sought an opinion from the Defense Commission indicates doubt as to the wisdom of proceeding with the suit at this time. The concern of the commission is also patent. For it has pointed out that the suit would, if successful, "require substantial changes in the entire economic set-up of an industry considered basic to the national defense."

Under these circumstances it would be very rash for the Department of Justice to take hasty action against the oil companies. This is no time to hamper current operations and discourage investment of new capital by industries expected to participate in the defense program.

If the proposed oil prosecutions are abandoned on the advice of the Defense Commission, it will not be necessary for the Department of Justice to pursue a policy of inaction in respect to all industries. On the contrary, it may be essential to institute suits under the anti-trust laws in order to remove trade restraints that reduce industrial output, boost prices, and hamper defense plans.

There is no hard and fast rule to guide the Department of Justice in its efforts to enforce the antitrust laws. At all times it is important to exercise discriminating judgment in the selection of cases for prosecution and in the timing of attacks. Such discrimination needs to be of a very high order in a period of emergency.

Trade With Russia

Under present conditions it is practically impossible for two nations to keep their commercial and political relations in watertight compartments. At the very least a certain process of osmosis is bound to occur.

That is why the conclusion of a new Russian-American trade agreement has been followed by speculation as to the possibility of a rapprochement between Washington and Moscow. Yet, while an examination of that possibility is clearly under way in official quarters, there is no certainty that it will bear fruit. The significance of the commercial agreement with Russia is thus, for the time being, wholly nonpolitical.

Because of the monopoly over Russian foreign trade exercised by the Moscow government, commercial relations between the United States and Russia have been regulated by a series of special agreements, each valid for a year. By virtue of these agreements the United States has pledged itself to accord unconditional most-favored-nation treatment to the trade of the Soviet Union. Russia, in return, has each time agreed to take a stipulated minimum of imports from this country.

On the whole, the agreement has worked fairly well. Russia has been able to enjoy the benefits of concessions made by the United States to nations with whom regular reciprocal trade agreements have been made. And each year the minimum total of American goods which the Soviet Union had agreed to buy here has been exceeded.

During the past year, however, general relations between the United States and Russia have been none too cordial. American public opinion was shocked by Stalin's volte-face in making an agreement with Hitler, in partitioning Poland, in attacking Finland and, most recently, in swallowing up Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. In the eyes of the people and Government of the United States Russia is an aggressor and the Administration has invoked against Russia moral embargoes it has applied to all other aggressor nations. Thus the sale to the Soviet government of airplanes and airplane parts and plans and machinery for the manufacture of high test gasoline has been discouraged.

In the negotiations leading up to the renewal of the Russian-American commercial agreement the United States did not budge an inch from the position it has taken regarding these moral embargoes. The agreement was, nonetheless, concluded. For in the eyes of Moscow, as of Washington, it is entirely a business arrangement. There are certain American goods which Russia needs and for which she is willing to pay. And we are willing to sell these goods to her, as we are willing to sell them to any other nation.

On this hard-boiled and unsentimental basis the agreement was renewed for another year.

Bases In The Caribbean

President Roosevelt has not revealed any details of the negotiations concerning establishment of United States naval and air bases on British islands in the Caribbean Sea. But the fact that such discussions are taking place is of great significance.

It cannot be too often stated that the Panama Canal is the keystone of our defense system. Protection of that waterway, so as to permit the Navy to operate in either the Pacific or the Atlantic, is the first essential to our national security. Consequently, the whole ring of islands which separates the Caribbean from the Atlantic is of the most vital interest to the United States.

Congress agreed to purchase the Virgin Islands in 1917 partly because the war in Europe at that time left their future status uncertain. Those islands are now an important factor in our defense system in the Caribbean. Only two months ago Congress appropriated funds to build a new naval base at Charlotte Amalie, an excellent harbor on the island of St. Thomas.

A naval air base at San Juan, Puerto Rico, is under construction. Funds have also been appropriated to strengthen the base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. These strongholds will give the United States unquestioned control of the central Caribbean area. But our position would be further strengthened by additional bases in the protecting shield of British and French islands stretching from St. Thomas to the coast of Venezuela.

Numerous channels are open between these islands. However, a naval base on Barbados or some of the other British possessions in the chain would give us an impregnable position in the South Caribbean. Similar concessions in the Bahamas, which guard the Straits of Florida, would doubtless prove equally valuable.

The Administration's efforts to strengthen our strategic position in this area are a logical sequence to the recent Havana conference. All the American republics are in agreement that British, French and Dutch possessions in this hemisphere must not be transferred to a non-American power. Likewise they are united in a policy of hemispheric defense. That policy imposes heavy responsibilities on the United States as the strongest power in the group.

To play its part effectively the United States must have adequate naval and air bases from which to operate. Nor should negotiations for the establishment of such bases be limited to Great Britain and Canada. Close cooperation with the Latin-American republics in defense of the entire hemisphere calls for well defined rights for use of South American bases when and if a threat of invasion arises.

Of equal importance are the negotiations with Canada concerning a mutual defense policy. Canada is an integral part of the Western Hemisphere. An attack against her would be the gravest sort of threat to the United States. For a hostile power in Canada would have three thousand miles of undefended border across which to launch assaults against the United States.

Any rights that Canada may give the United States to build or use naval bases will contribute to her defense as well as to ours. In the case of Great Britain, it must be assumed that the United States will offer adequate compensation for the valuable concessions this country hopes to obtain.

What form that compensation will take cannot now be ascertained. If it should involve a transfer of over-age American destroyers to Great Britain, that proposal would have to be weighed against the very substantial advantages this country would gain from additional naval and air bases in the Caribbean.

Tongue In Cheek

Representative Nichols must have had his tongue in his cheek when he introduced his bill to cede most of the District back to Maryland. There is no probability that his plan will be accepted. Indeed, the bill contains some features that seem to have been drafted as a guarantee against its enactment.

Mr. Nichols stands prominently among those who view the District merely as a seat of government for the Nation. As a member of the House District Committee, he has shown little concern for the wishes or the rights of the local community. Yet he now proposes to divide the Capital City without adequate protection of Federal interests.

The Nichols bill calls for a five-man board to decide what portions of Washington, in addition to the Capitol, the White House and the Mall, should remain under Federal control. This board would represent the Senate, House, Interior Department, National Capital Park and Planning Commission and residents of the District. But final acceptance of the plan would be left to the Maryland Legislature and local residents.

In other words, the fate of the Capital City would be decided by a referendum among its inhabitants rather than by action of Congress. That one provision is sufficiently out of line with Mr. Nichols' long-standing attitude in dealing with the District to suggest that his bill is only a feint.

Fortunately, Congress is not likely to give this gesture any serious attention. To cede the residential areas of Washington back to Maryland would be to confess failure on the part of Congress to solve the District's problems. Far from making any such confession, Congress now seems determined to pass the Sumners resolution. If that proposed constitutional amendment should then be ratified by the States, it would open the way for solution of the city's difficulties in the accepted American way.

So the only thing significant about Mr. Nichols' maneuver is the admission on his part that some action should be taken to relieve Washington of its present predicament. That should carry him a long way toward support of the only reform now in sight—the Sumners resolution.

Hopeful Precedent

Washington's new health code is one of the most significant pieces of local legislation adopted here in recent years. It brings up to date many obsolete regulations, some of which date back to 1897. Even more important, however, is the method by which this modernization has been accomplished.

The importance of public health reforms in the District stands out sharply from every mortality table in which this city is represented. Each year Washington has approximately three more deaths per 1,000 inhabitants than the average large American city. As The Post has previously noted, this record suggests the needless sacrifice of more than 1,800 persons per year in the Capital City because of our inadequate public health service.

It is against this background that the significance of the new health code must be measured. Heretofore the District has had no clear-cut power to compel hospitalization of persons spreading tuberculosis or other plagues among their families, friends and neighbors. Now Health Officer Ruhland has ample authority to confine a person suffering from a communicable disease in a hospital, if continued freedom of that individual would jeopardize the public health.

This regulation implies, of course, that the District will maintain public institutions to which such persons can be sent. Facilities to care for indigent victims of communicable diseases are now available at Gallinger Hospital and the Glenn Dale Tuberculosis Sanitarium. But additional quarters are needed, particularly for patients who suffer from chronic tuberculosis. Funds to make the new code more fully effective have been requested in the 1942 budget estimates.

Regulations as to the reporting of contagious diseases have also been tightened. In short, the District now has a fully modern and effective health code that should notably assist in cutting the annual toll of needless deaths here.

Many citizens are doubtless surprised that such an important reform could be put into effect without action by Congress. In the past, Congress attempted to control public health here by passing piecemeal legislation whenever a particular situation became so bad that it could no longer be ignored. Last year, however, Congress granted the District Commissioners authority to make all reasonable rules for the prevention and control of communicable disease.

Experts in the Health Department spent a year working out the new code with the cooperation of the District Medical Society and the United States Public Health Service. Now the completed code has been put into effect by action of the Commissioners. It will not be necessary to inject this local issue into a Congressional session that has little time for anything save national defense.

The procedure followed in this case is thoroughly sound and obviously constructive. Why, then, should it be confined to public health regulations? Congress should recognize that, vital as it is, health is only one of the District's pressing municipal problems. Hope of modernizing other obsolete regulations will be almost negligible until the task is assigned to the local government.

Judging from the way many Democratic groups are fighting one another, it is obvious that the Democratic Party must be split into more factions than in-laws at a family reunion.

Willkie is fast gaining in popularity in towns and small cities. Soon, no doubt, the Republicans will issue this revised version: "As Main street goes, so goes the Nation."

We confidently predict that the Old Maids lobby will bring sufficient pressure to bear on Congress to secure a favorable vote on the conscription bill at an early date.

War And Starvation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let us suppose (better still, hope) that the Battle of Britain ends in a stalemate. What then? Surely, despite the suggestions of Mr. Lindbergh, we are not going to deal with a German Europe. Surely, we are not going to accept as a decided fact a civilization evolved through brutality, inhumanity and a system contrary to our mode of life. And yet we could hardly forsake the millions of human beings who would be held by the seemingly impregnable Nazi yoke.

We are opposed to an aggressive European war which would require the shipment of troops overseas. The only hope, therefore, for the unleashing of those held in Nazi concentration camps lies in the possible uprising of an oppressed and dissatisfied populace.

For such an uprising to take root in a soil fouled by Gestapo and fear propaganda, there must be sown strong seeds of discontent. Should the German Europe prove unable to house its hybrid population, such population must of necessity cry out for food, liberty, freedom. Great Britain is now helping to emphasize the deficiencies of a German Europe, with a Nazi system, in its relations with the democratic nations and democratic ideals. These deficiencies become illustrated in tangible form when there is a growing fear of "starvation of the conquered."

Regardless of the typical Nazi denials, Germany has the duty to feed its conquered peoples—at least to leave with them the machinery to feed themselves. If these peoples cannot be fed without outside aid, then the Nazi system is lacking. It then fails in one of its basic obligations.

This Nation, Mr. Herbert Hoover notwithstanding, must not defeat Great Britain's attempt to debunk the Nazi hoax. "Starvation" is an ugly word; "slavery," an uglier one. We are not in a position to lend any greater aid to Great Britain in her life battle against a ruthless invader. Certainly, we must not make her struggle the more difficult by defeating her most effective weapon. We must not press the British government to allow food shipments to reach the European continent.

MORTIMER M. CAPLIN.

Social Planning And Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A letter published in your columns on July 23 is an excellent example of how the second part of the invisible Fifth Column performs its frequently voluntary but absolutely essential function. It was titled "The End of an Epoch." It deserves comment because it was written by the field representative of the National Association for Social and Economic Planning. It therefore might be taken to represent the views of a group—not of an individual.

Concealed perhaps even from the author in a considerable mass of verbiage are some very dangerous and I believe thoroughly unsound attacks on the democratic ideal and on the possibility of preserving any of the hard-won institutions of the American way of life.

The purpose of an organization devoted to social planning should be to forecast trends, to consider possible alternatives, and to evolve effective ways to do something about guiding society toward that better and more abundant life which is the dream of all men of good will. At the end of an epoch such guidance is urgently needed. If Mr. Galloway speaks for the planning group, we are to have stones and no bread, it seems.

Our planners tell us with Cassandric eloquence where we must arrive, but are powerless to tell us how. It is only a step from this curious conclusion that all economic-sociological-political roads lead to the inevitable Rome of "empirical collectivism," to the disconcerting thought that since nothing can be done to change our destiny, we need take no thought as to the road we travel.

The bloody road to Stalinism or the corpse-macadamed road of Nazism will both take us to our destination quicker than the hesitant road of democratic processes. And there is something to be said in getting a bad business over as quickly as possible, so we can arrive in Heaven—or is it Hell?—with the least delay.

If so-called social planning is of any use and has any meaning its usefulness and its message is that man is to some extent the master of his fate. If the best that economic planning can do is to tell us that all the roads we might travel lead to but one end, its value is nil.

Of much greater practical importance in our country today is the point that a leader of a movement favoring the development of social and economic planning is willing to make a public statement that the democratic system has failed and is at the present moment outmoded. A corollary of Mr. Galloway's position would seem to be that without planning we must perish, and that under a democratic system no planning is possible.

Believers in a democratic process should, under the circumstances, give very careful thought to the implications of Mr. Galloway's position, and perhaps they should make up their minds about two alternatives: If Mr. Galloway is right we might as well strike the banners of democracy and admit defeat. If Mr. Galloway is wrong, perhaps we should earnestly strive with him to see the light, probably a futile hope.

Perhaps a government of the people, for the people, and by the people is the hard way to maintain human liberty and to work forward empirically—that is by experimental methods—to better social methods—to better social and economic arrangements. It seems to be, in the light of history, about the only way that such an ideal can be realized in practice. Through the give and take of the two-party system the advances are incorporated into our economy and the mistakes are gradually sloughed off.

Since the ideal of this procedure is the greatest good for all the people, it is in effect a slowly emerging "empirical collectivism," which seems to mean merely an experimental determination of what is best for the greatest number. Yet it appears that the whole tenor of Mr. Galloway's letter is opposed to the democratic process, and apparently looks forward to the day when all this will be repudiated and our puppet planners will shape the things to come in the scheme of "continental monopoly."

Those who are in touch with recent advances in experimental and applied psychology realize that the Nazi attack on the free peoples of Europe has used ruthlessly the resources not only of the physical sciences but has also perverted to evil uses all that is known about influencing the minds and emotions of men. The mind and the spirit of European democracies has been violated by a devilishly ingenious, carefully planned and skillfully executed psychological and spiritual blitzkrieg. We ourselves are being exposed to part of this same technique in the German short-wave broadcasts.

It would seem to be one of the functions of a National Economic and Social Planning Association to recognize such facts, and to call attention to the methods being used to destroy our way of life.

Jeffersonian Democrats?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is surely time, in the interest of accuracy, to file a protest against the label "Jeffersonian" assumed by Democrats opposed to the Roosevelt Administration and to the New Deal or any new deal. An immediate occasion for this protest is found in The Post editorial August 10, "Mr. Farley's Mantle," in which Democrats not in sympathy with the New Deal are identified as Jeffersonian Democrats.

That this is a misleading label is made fairly clear by consideration of facts or events. The New Deal of course followed the depression of 1930-32 when the national income fell in two short years from 81 billions to the equivalent of 50 billions of 1929 dollars. Whatever one may think of the New Deal and the recovery of real national income above the 1929 level, it will surely have to be admitted that the New Deal, as a matter of history, was born of the depression and represents a democratic attempt to return to the governmental principles upheld by Thomas Jefferson and opposed by Alexander Hamilton.

To make this clear the aristocratic philosophy of Hamilton, "your people, sir, is a great beast," may be contrasted with Jefferson's trust of the people as the ultimate governing power. Vox populi, vox Dei, expresses the Jeffersonian principle. The fight still wages between Hamilton, who wanted government in the interest of a privileged few, and Jefferson, who stood for democracy with a small "d" and for the rights of the many.

Roosevelt and the New Deal stand for the Jeffersonian principle of democracy opposed to government for the few which preceded the depression. For those opposed to a third term of the New Deal to assume the Jeffersonian mantle would appear to be a triumph of intellectual dishonesty.

The truth is, the Hamiltonian Democrats are "purging" themselves. Roosevelt appears to be succeeding in the project announced Jackson Day, 1939, with allusion to Tweedledums and Tweedledees, the project of making the Democratic Party the "liberal" party. His choice of Henry Wallace as his running mate and successor proves the point. Roosevelt trusts the people.

P. H. Did Not Wait

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: O for more old-time statesmen like Patrick Henry who did not wait for the Redcoats to land, but at the risk of his life made the famous speech warning the people to prepare.

Are we going to be like the Athenians when Demosthenes warned them in his philippics, or like the English when Churchill and others warned them?

Of course, we don't want war, and the best way to prevent it is to be prepared and keep prepared.

The question for Congress to decide is, do we want to be Churchills or Chamoerlains.

Politicians Blamed

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Who caused the fall of Czecho-Slovakia? Politicians.

Who caused the fall of Poland? Politicians.

Who caused the fall of Finland? Politicians.

Who caused the fall of Albania? Politicians.

Who caused the fall of France? Politicians.

Who can cause the fall of England? Politicians.

Who could cause the United States to fall? Politicians.

THE WAR will not end till March 6, 1947, but before it does end, it will have been reduced to a stalemate of exhaustion. Then will come a just and permanent peace of the whole world. Thus saith Dr. Brown Landone. What is his authority for this prophecy? The calculations of the greatest mathematicians of the world written in the stone structure of the halls and temples of the Great Pyramid of Gizeh are the basis, Dr. Landone tells us, for his prophecy.

These teleois figures and measurements bear proportionate relations to one another and it is the interpretations of these relations that the prophetic truth in the great stone monument is revealed. In "The Book of Gold" Dr. Landone admits that his interpretations of the true meaning of these figures are mathematically too intricate for the general reader to follow and they are of importance only to students of mathematics. The really important thing: Are the prophecies revealed by them true and do these records, decoded, serve as a guide of wisdom to humanity in the future?

He declares that they do, and the proof is that every prophecy he has made concerning events of the past has come true. In a lecture at the Sorbonne at Paris in the spring of 1914 and months in advance of the World War of 1914-18, he correctly predicted the coming of that event in the following August. That enhanced his reputation as a prophet, and in 1936, when many people of the world began to fear another World War, they wrote, urging him to unveil for them the immediate future. Then late in that year and three years prior to the outbreak of the present World War, he resumed his studies of the teleois circles in the Great Pyramid.

His calculations disclosed that August 9, 1939, would be the most fateful day in the history of the modern world, for what would occur on that day would rock the world. It was on that date, he tells us, that Hitler definitely decided to invade Poland and thus plunge Europe into another World War. But it was not till the second and third weeks in June, 1939, that he made an open declaration of this prophecy in lectures, to be exact, June 20 and 21, before audiences in Minneapolis. The next week, June 27 and 28, in public lectures in Toronto and Hamilton, Canada, he repeated and emphasized this prophecy of August 9 among others. Dr. Landone, is, however, careful to add that these circles do not always indicate the nature of the events that will happen. They mainly reveal the time when great changes will come. They do this by the time basis of the cubic structure of the temples and the proportions of the teleois circles.

Affidavits are on file as proof that he publicly made these prophecies on the dates in advance of August 9. He lists more than a score of decisive events on August 9, all leading up to and making inevitable the present World War; that is, 30 world important conferences within 24 hours. Never did so many events fateful for the destiny of the world occur on the same day as on August 9.

Affidavits are also on file as proof, he says, that he predicted in the latter part of 1936, Great Britain would on March 6, 1939, secretly seek union with Russia; that Germany would on March 15, 1939, seize Czecho-Slovakia; that Madrid would surrender to the Fascists on March 29, 1939; that Italy would take Albania on April 9, 1939; that Germany would invade Poland September 1, 1939, and that Great Britain and France would declare war on Germany September 3, 1939. In addition to these accurate forecasts, he points out that in 1936 he made one of the most important and significant announcements for the year 1939, that the Japanese Ambassador in Rome would state on December 5, 1939, the four totalitarian powers—Russia, Germany, Japan and Italy—must unite, and true to date the Japanese Ambassador made that statement.

Dr. Landone, claiming no more than a correct decoding and interpretation of these prophecies in his mathematical calculations, is positive that, "whenever you know the two factors, the nature of conditions producing the change, and the time rate of the change, you can with certainty prophesy what will happen, not only four seconds ahead, but 40 years ahead." The builders of Gizeh and other great temples, knew these two factors and recorded them in the teleois circles and the cubic dimensions of the halls and temples to mark the progress of humanity through its seven great civilizations. The proportions in the teleois are the same as the proportionate distances between the sun and the planets in the Solar System, the same as in a snowflake, the same law of proportion as in the musical scale with its four determining tones and seven intervals. This law of proportion prevails in the human body, and it governs the design and construction of every beautiful object in nature and art.

All prophecies, we are told by the author, have in the past come true, when based on correct calculations of the proportionate spaces of the teleois circles and their relations to the cubic dimensions of the halls and temples in this Great Pyramid. The one prophecy that now chiefly concerns humanity is the termination of the war and its results. According to the calculations made by this mathematician, the world began a great transforming change in 1939, not so much scientific and philosophical as spiritual. It is a transformation to be effected by idealized action on the part of humanity as a whole, a change, which will bring age-long desires into actuality. That is, between August 9, 1939, and March 6, 1947, the lesson must be learned that without action the highest ideal is but a soul desire, dying unborn.

Dr. Landone holds that humanity entered the Hall of Transforming Action in the Great Pyramid on August 10, 1939, and that this initial process of transforming action will continue till March 6, 1947. In this transforming process it will be learned that brutalizing action will bring reaction among nations as certainly as among individuals. Out of this welter of blood and lies men will learn the need of a new mode of action by which they can make their ideals come true. This new form of action is service to one another. The records in the Temple of Transfiguration, March 6, 1947, to November 22, 2000, show that the great dream of the race will come true.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Fantasy And Reality In Defense

SENATOR TAFT undertook to explain to the Senate this week that our soldiers have not learned the military lessons of the war when they ask for conscription. "We must remember," said the Senator, "that conscription, universal military service, was in force in Belgium, in Holland, in France, and it did not do them any good. . . . The Germans have developed a new technique in warfare, in connection with which the requirement is for a highly professional force acting with perfect harmony and timing."

Now it is not possible to suppose that Senator Taft thinks the Germans do not have conscription and that they have developed a new technique of warfare by recruiting by voluntary enlistment an army of professionals.

He must know better than that. Yet he allowed himself to argue that conscription is a military mistake because the conscript army of France was defeated by the conscript army of Germany. Then to make sure that his reasoning should bite its own head off, he proposed that in order to bring in volunteers for "a highly professional force acting with perfect harmony and timing" the period of professional training for the highly professional force be reduced from three years to one year and three months. So the net position of Senator Taft is that in order to avoid the mistakes of France and to profit by the successes of Germany, we should have a smaller reserve of partially trained men than the army is seeking and that the regular army itself should have a 60 per cent shorter period of training. This would hardly seem to be the way to develop a highly professional force acting with perfect harmony and timing.

FURTHERMORE, it has often been said by Senator Taft and others that there is no point in making ready to train a million men because the full military equipment for an army of 750,000 men will not be completed until 1942. The idea seems to be that men should be called up for training only as the army is ready to provide them with all the tanks, airplanes, machine guns, armored cars and what not of a perfectly armed combat force. This is rather like saying that no baby ought to be born until its parents have ready in the attic the clothes which the grown boy will wear when, having been graduated from school, he goes to work.

If Senator Taft will study the development of the German army, he will discover that the process of training "for perfect harmony and timing" began long before the equipment existed. The German troops began to learn their tactics and their discipline, and the officers learned how to command them, by drilling with shovels before they had rifles, with wooden tanks before they had steel tanks, with gliders and civilian airplanes before they had their bombers and fighters. They were training their army for seven years under Hitler before they went to war, and it was only in the latter years of this period that they were equipped with the full complement of real weapons. Moreover, this training was carried out by a caste of officers brought up in the great military tradition of Prussia and seasoned, the greater part of them at least, by the tremendous military experience of the other war. It is, therefore, quite misleading for Senators to give the American people the impression that we can wait to begin training until the weapons are finished, and that then in a period of 15 months the men can hurriedly learn to use them and the officers can hurriedly learn to command the men who use them.

THE FACT of the matter is that these Senators are in flight from the realities and are taking refuge in sheer wishfulness. As evidence we have only to look at Senator Taft's summary of the requirements of American national defense.

"The permanent emergency," he declared, "does not demand more than a 2-ocean navy, the air force already provided for, an army of 750,000 men under arms, and 1,250,000 reserves." Presumably, then, the emergency does demand that much. But the fact is that (a) we do not have a 2-ocean navy, and (b) that we do not have the air force "already provided for," and (c) do not have 750,000 men under arms, and (d) we do not have 1,250,000 reserves.

And so, if the emergency demands this much military power which we do not possess, the overshadowing concern of responsible statesmen ought to be to think up ways and means of hastening the process of developing this force and their minds should be seeking ways to strengthen our defenses at once while we enlarge the navy, the air force and the army. That is not the attitude of the opposition in Congress. The burden of their argument is that there is no need to hurry, and that they are the cool, experienced men "in a moment of excitement and hysteria." So they would like to delay the conscription bill. Have they considered the effect of delaying it? Does anyone think that the tempo of American rearmament will be accelerated, that the obstructions of private interests will be liquidated, that politics will be subordinated to patriotism, if Congress now, after a solemn debate, rejects the principle of universal service and decides to experiment for another six months or a year with an advertising campaign and an offer of another thirty cents a day?

This measure is recognized throughout the world as the obvious and indispensable foundation of military power; for Congress to reject it will be notice to the world and to this country, that the nation is too much divided and too little resolute to carry out in fact the armament program which it has authorized.

BUT EVEN if the measure is adopted, even with the utmost effort, there will remain the critical interval—covering a period of many years—before the defenses, which Senator Taft does approve, can actually be constructed. For that interval other measures of defense are necessary, and the cornerstone of those other measures of defense is the proposal to trade over-age destroyers and some small craft for naval and air bases in the British possessions in this hemisphere.

In the debate on Thursday Senator Tydings made the point that in trading in old airplanes for new ones, the United States had benefited. He then argued that to sell the destroyers for cash would be a different kind of transaction since what we need is not cash but military force. The point is well taken. But if, as seems possible, the British are willing to give us leases for naval and air bases in Newfoundland, Bermuda, and their strategically placed colonies in the Caribbean, we shall strengthen our naval position immeasurably. For the United States, one of the great uses of the destroyer is as a scout because we have such an immense ocean frontier to watch. To possess a chain of outposts in that ocean from which scouting vessels and aircraft can patrol the sea would be enormously to increase the value of the navy we have. A chain of strategic bases from the approaches of Canada to the northern coast of South America would make every ship we have more useful. This is by all odds the quickest way to strengthen the navy at once.

If anyone doubts this, let him consider what would be the position in the Pacific if the United States did not have a naval base in the outlying Hawaiian Islands or the right to establish bases in Alaska. Yet in the Atlantic there are no equivalent island outposts north of the inner Caribbean Sea, and if we can get them at once by a friendly exchange, without the risk of having to claim them or seize them later, no words will ever describe adequately our folly if we reject the offer.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Reply To Guildsman

IT IS NOT my intention to crusade on Mrs. Roosevelt's ineligibility for membership in the American Newspaper Guild, which is a detached auxiliary of the Communist Party. However, I would like to present and discuss a letter by James P. Kirby, chairman of the Cleveland Press unit of the guild, published in that paper, which bears on the guild.

"No one recognizes more than myself the futility of attempting to reply to the scurrilities of Westbrook Pegler, spokesman for at least a considerable branch of the organized newspaper publishers," he wrote. "Indeed, it would be impossible to descend to his level of vituperation. But the baseness of his attacks on Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, it seems to me, requires that certain facts be set down for the record.

"Mrs. Roosevelt joined the guild on invitation. She became a member of the same local to which Pegler himself belonged, and the record does not disclose that at the time Pegler exercised his right as a memoer to protest her membership.

"Mrs. Roosevelt resigned from the D. A. R. when that organization grossly insulted one of the great artists of our day, Marian Anderson, by refusing her the privilege of singing from its stage.

"The record would hardly be complete without recalling that Mr. Pegler's first column in his present capacity was a vigorous defense of lynching in America. And, finally, it is pertinent to recall that Pegler saw nothing inconsistent in attending the funeral of the late Heywood Broun within a few days after his most disgraceful diatribe against that great American while Broun lay on his deathbed."

BEFORE I GO to town in the limited space left after presentation of his letter I would like to call attention to his pointed avoidance of the subject of communistic control in the guild and of the political job which was done in the recent national convention in Memphis, whereby two Communist factions not only stifled discussion of the Stalinist influence as "Red-baiting" but reelected the Communist control, stronger than ever. Neither Mr. Kirby nor any other defender of this Communist transmission belt ever descends to the level of the facts, and any revelation of the facts is scurrilous "Red-baiting."

Note, also, that Mr. Kirby avoids discussion of the actual question whether Mrs. Roosevelt is eligible. He knows she is not, because newspaper work is not her principal occupation. However, I was pitching to his weakness there, for he must know also the Communist control in New York has added to its own strength by admitting many ineligibles of Communist tinge for their sympathy and support.

So you see why he carefully keeps off the actual subject of eligibility, which was the basis of my discussion.

AND, NOW, where was the scurrility? Is it scurrility to point out that Mrs. Roosevelt is here presuming to meddle in a struggle which is none of her business and on the side of an organization which is trying to drive out of the newspaper business every writer who declines to join an auxiliary of the Communist Party? That was the gist of my two pieces on the subject.

I added the observation that her rise in journalism at a type of job which regular newspaper people reach only after many years of work was abrupt and synchronized with the election returns of 1932. Any argument on that?

Now let's see. So I am spokesman for a considerable branch of the organized newspaper publishers. The answer is that I am employed by only one paper and know probably not more than a dozen publishers. But Mr. Kirby is more tolerant of spokesmen of the Moscow government in the high official list of the organization of which he is also an officer.

IT IS TRUE that I never protested Mrs. Roosevelt's membership. I didn't know then that the organization would go Communist and figured that this was just an honorary membership, anyway. However, I did twitch when they barred Gen. Johnson on the ground that he wasn't liberal enough.

As to Mrs. Roosevelt's resignation from the D. A. R., I can point out that she hasn't resigned from the Democratic Party, which surely has been guilty of worse discriminations than the silly ban on Marian Anderson or, now, from the Newspaper Guild under communist leadership.

Well, I didn't defend lynching in America, as reference to that piece will prove, and now I come to the last point raised by this gallant knight who objects to scurrility.

In that point he lies.

Heywood Broun was tough in controversy, and he was not on his deathbed or even sick when I reproduced out of his own writings his declaration of faith in Soviet Russia as "the greatest effort ever made for human betterment." Broun was well and working, and it was reasonable to assume that he would take advantage of his daily opportunity to justify a general indorsement of the communist government. If Mr. Kirby denies that Broun was well and working at the time I will make him eat his lie.

FRANCIS P. SAYRE
The High Commissioner to the Philippines is proving that his velvet glove covers a hand of iron, says Vicente Albano Pacis in a special dispatch from Manila

Sayre And Quezon

By Vicente Albana Pacis

The High Commissioner Dissents

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila.

AN EX-HARVARD pundit, Francis B. Sayre, United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, is a mild-looking individual. If you see him for the first time you will never suspect that he had the spunk as a comparatively young man to court a daughter of a President of the United States and marry her at a White House wedding.

It took Manila about a year to disabuse itself of its first impression of the suave, well-mannered former university professor. Although almost right at the start he found himself obliged to indulge in a bit of spanking, although ever so mildly, it was only a week or so ago that he really rolled up his sleeves, hauled his razor strop down from its peg, and took President Manuel L. Quezon's four-year-old Commonwealth to the barn for a sound thrashing. Only it was not in an ordinary barn; it was in his sumptuous office in the new $1,000,000 Federal Building constructed on reclaimed land on the fringe of Manila Bay where some of Admiral Dewey's shells overshot the Spanish fleet and hissed into the water some 42 years ago.

Immediately after his arrival he found that the National Assembly had appropriated some 100,000,000 pesos of the money that the United States collects from coconut oil imported from the islands and scrupulously refunds to the Philippine government. By Congressional decree, the fund, which amounts to some 50,000,000 pesos a year, had been earmarked for the adjustment of the islands' economy from one 85 per cent dependent on American trade preference to one able to compete in the open world market. As he found that most of the money had been appropriated for projects ranging from much-needed buildings to plain pork-barrel items, he had the Assembly recall most of the appropriations.

ALL THIS was done with tact and diplomacy, with only vague reports reaching the columns of the Manila press. When he had satisfied himself that none of the money would be diverted from the purpose Congress had intended it, he settled down to the routine set by Frank Murphy and Paul V. McNutt. This consisted of innocuous weekly press conferences and shuttling from Manila to Baguio, the summer city where wealthy Filipinos go to show off and Americans go to recharge their batteries with Temperate Zone climate. To be sure, McNutt, another ex-professor, had briefly broken the monotony when in a July 4 address he indirectly charged that the Philippines had the forms but not the substance of democracy. But he failed in the follow-through and wound up by swapping compliments with President Quezon in public.

But, of course, what recently happened under Sayre's nose had not happened under those of Murphy and McNutt. To begin with, the four-year-old Philippine Constitution was amended by the National Assembly so radically that the two basic innovations its framers claimed for the document were discarded. These were the six-year-term for the President without reelection, directly copied from Mexico, and the unicameral Legislature, imported from Nebraska. The unconcealed main purpose of the Assembly, however, was to enable Quezon to run legally for reelection.

The amendments have, of course, to be approved by the President of the United States or they are just so many unconsummated proposals. For this reason Sayre did not show more than mild interest in the amendment movement. When, however, he began to be swamped with reports of frauds in the constitutional plebiscite from both Filipino and American sources, he became irked and declared in one of his press conferences, "The Philippine Commonwealth has ten years to prove itself capable of self-rule. If election frauds have been committed and the Commonwealth does not act against those responsible for them, it would be proven that the country is still not capable of independence. If America has to intervene, it might well mean the end of the independence program."

Nor was he satisfied with merely taking a lonely shot. He laid a barrage which sent even the most smug local politician scampering for cover.

ON AN INCIPIENT legislative move to postpone the provincial and municipal elections scheduled for December, 1940, on the excuse of making them coincide with the Presidential election in November, 1941, he stated that democratic nations do not postpone elections. "True democracy," he emphasized, "means frequent periodic consultation with the people. If you postpone an election, you are striking at the very heart of democracy, you are going that much farther from democracy. I am against postponement of an election in any country which professes to have a democratic form of government."

At the same time he announced that he had airmailed the proposed constitutional amendments to President Roosevelt with his recommendations. When asked what his recommendations were, he replied ominously that only President Roosevelt can divulge them. Political circles speculated whether or not the many charges of frauds had influenced his recommendations.

Some of the charges are stuffing ballot boxes, illegal voting and preventing bona-fide voters from casting their ballots. Assemblymen returned to Manila bragging that when they arrived in their districts a few days before the plebiscite, they found 90 per cent of their constituents against the amendments, but that when the ballots had been counted there were only a few "no" votes.

At another press conference a week earlier Sayre had contradicted Quezon, who had advocated the abolition of political parties and the restriction of individual liberty, calling these institutions mere fetishes of democracy. Quezon had been building-up public opinion behind his request before the Assembly for arbitrary powers over industry and labor, food and resources, transportation and carriers. Specifically, he also asked for authority to prevent social agitation.

"I believe," caustically commented Sayre, "the life of a democracy is stimulated by a vigorous expression of the views of the minority. Democracy is based on the determination of issues, and the way to determine issues, to get those over to the people, is through two parties."

Unless it is to court American intervention, and thus abruptly bring about the end of the independence program, the Commonwealth will probably look into the alleged election frauds and decide not to postpone the elections, abolish political parties, restrict individual liberty, and grant totalitarian powers to the President. This is how deadly earnest the erstwhile mild Harvard pundit is now being taken by local politicians.

Called Step Backward

An Oklahoma Congressman's proposal to cede the District back to Maryland continued to stir lively debate in Washington yesterday, marking the only development in the local suffrage crusade.

Opponents of the annexation plan, outlined in a bill introduced Thursday by Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, outnumbered proponents yesterday, just as they did on the previous day when Senator William H. King, of Utah, and Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, and Hatton Sumners, of Texas, criticized the scheme.

Meanwhile the House Rules Committee office revealed that Chairman Adolph Sabath probably will call a meeting for either Monday or Tuesday, the day depending upon which will bring the larger attendance.

No Assurance of Vote

Even so, there is no assurance a vote will be taken on the Sumners resolution, which provides for a constitutional amendment on national representation for the District, since at least six other requests for special rules on various bills are to be considered at the same meeting.

The Sumners resolution has been favorably reported by the House Judiciary Committee but cannot be placed on the calendar until the Rules Committee gives it the green light.

Voicing skepticism of the Nichols bill yesterday were Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (Democrat), of Maryland; Melvin D. Hildreth, Washington attorney and Democratic worker who was instrumental in having a District suffrage plank inserted in the party's Chicago platform, and William A. Roberts, former People's Counsel and an active campaigner for the vote.

Representative Sasscer, whose Congressional district includes adjacent Prince Georges County, said:

"I believe it would be best for the District of Columbia to remain a distinct entity, with representation in Congress and some form of suffrage."

"All who pay taxes should have representation and that rule should apply to Washington taxpayers."

Cession of the District to Maryland, even with certain portions indispensable to the Federal Government exempted, would be a sad step backward, according to Hildreth.

"If we have no faith in the working of democracy in the Nation's Capital, it is an unhappy commentary on a country which tries to convince the rest of the world democracy is the best form of government," he declared.

Leave It to States

"Enactment of the Sumners resolution would put it up to the States to decide whether Washington should have representation in Congress. I have no doubt what their verdict would be. They would pass the constitutional amendment."

Roberts, also a practicing attorney, called the Nichols proposal a red herring being dragged across the Sumners resolution trail.

"The people of Washington have no desire to preserve our separate identity. Not only must the fight for a constitutional amendment giving the District national representation be pushed but Congress meantime should be giving us an elective city government."

Maryland Senators Neutral

Maryland's two Democratic Senators, Millard E. Tydings and George L. Radcliffe, volunteered mild comments but, on the whole, maintained a neutral stand.

Senator Radcliffe said he is "very much interested in the annexation plan and that Maryland always is anxious to add "good citizens and territory" to her jurisdiction, but reserved judgment on the desirability of cession.

"There are many intricate problems, such as taxation, that would have to be worked out and I haven't gone into that," he said. "There is a sentimental argument for cession, in that Virginia got back the land she ceded for establishment of the Capital City, while Maryland didn't."

Senator Tydings asserted that he planned to work neither for nor against Nichols' proposal, explaining that Maryland ought to be glad to take back what was once a part of her domain, but did not wish to act the part of an "Indian giver."

Favors Nichols' Plan

Making it clear that he spoke only for himself, rather than for the organization he heads, President Wilbur S. Finch of the District Suffrage Association said he favors the Nichols plan as one which would give District citizens "the most they could get through the simplest procedure."

Finch thinks, however, Congress should go right ahead and pass legislation giving Washington an elective municipal government, he said.

"Cession to Maryland of the non-Federal part of the District, as provided in the Nichols bill, would give the residents every political privilege enjoyed by the State's other citizens.

"But if the Sumners' plan goes through instead, it will be a lot more difficult getting the States to pass the proposed constitutional amendment than would be the case if Washington had an elective city government with officials to go out and campaign for the amendment."

Harry Stull, president of the Federaiton of Citizens Associations, said Congress should concentrate on the Sumners' resolution.

President Roosevelt was asked at his press conference yesterday what he thought of the local suffrage movement, but he declined to go further than to state he still has it under consideration.

Leave for Encampment

District members of the United Spanish War Veterans left Washington by automobile yesterday to attend the national encampment which opens tomorrow in Detroit, Mich. Another group of delegates will leave by special train at 8 a. m. today. The encampment will close Thursday, 3:30 p. m.

What British Navy Means To U. S.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT announces that the American Government is holding conversations with Britain looking to the acquisition of naval and air bases, chiefly in the West Indies, for defense, by the United States, of the American Hemisphere.

Mr. Roosevelt's announcement is limited to what it says. To speculate about details might embarrass the Administration. But we can inquire what this means, as an incident of what is going on in the world; as, so to speak, an incident of nature. We can look into it as one detail of the broad condition which is forced upon the United States by the European war, and the turn it has taken.

We, America, are learning—there is being forced upon us—understanding of what it may mean to the United States if Britain should be conquered by Germany; and if, as a consequence, Britain should lose her dominance on the sea—in short, if the British navy should pass into the possession of Germany, or be destroyed, or be otherwise rendered impotent.

I say "we" are learning this. "We" means, so far, the Government, the Administration. The Administration has long known what loss of the British navy would mean to America. But the people generally do not know. The sooner the country does know, the easier will be the necessary task of our Government.

THE PEOPLE of the United States are about to be educated out of one of the most persistent fallacies that ever misled an easy-going and complacent people. This century-old fallacy is that the United States, the American continent, is "protected" from Europe by the Atlantic Ocean—that the Atlantic is a moat defending us against invasion from Europe. But the hard fact, now being forced upon us, is that the Atlantic is not a moat at all, but a lane; and that the thing which really served as our protection was the British navy. And the immediate fact, which the Administration now faces, and is wisely acting upon, is that there is danger the British navy may be prevented from continuing to serve as this protection. Seeing that possibility, the Administration is doing what we must do if the danger becomes actuality. We are preparing to be our own protection. We are preparing our Navy and air force to do for us, and for the whole American continent, the thing which the British navy has long done.

To most of our land-living people, this means merely a larger American Navy. They think that an increased number of American ships can do what the same number of British ships have done. But our people will learn from Mr. Roosevelt's announcement that a larger navy, more ships, is not enough. A navy is more than ships. A navy is bases, including bases far from home shores—bases as far as practicable in the direction from which an enemy may come.

SO WE are in negotiation to acquire some of the British possessions near our shores which we can use as bases. Whatever we can get from Britain will help. But the hard fact is that even if we acquire every British possession in the Western Hemisphere, we will still not be as well protected as we have been by the British navy. It was the British navy, plus the British possessions, and plus especially the home base of the British navy, England itself, situated at the gateway leading from Europe to America—it was the combination of all this that has protected us. To express it picturesquely, if we were really going to acquire for ourselves all the things that made the British navy effective, as a protection of the American continent, we should be obliged to acquire England itself.

That, of course, is expressing it picturesquely. But that brings home to us the essential nature of our problem. If we were willing to do what would be equal to and better than acquiring bases, we would have our Navy cooperate with Britain's. If we were willing to act today to avert a danger, instead of merely preparing to meet it later on, we would help to prevent destruction of the British navy. We would have our Navy cooperate with Britain's.

SOMETHING LIKE cooperation is what we are actually doing, even though it be in the form of negotiation across a table. For the naval bases Mr. Roosevelt asks, he, of course, expects to give quid pro quo. Britain would transfer to us certain islands which at the moment are not necessary to her. We would transfer to Britain something which at the moment is not necessary to us. What Britain asks from us may or may not be those much-discussed 50 destroyers. If so, the arrangement would be helpful. Still further arrangements of the same sort would be still more helpful. If, by anything we transfer to Britain, we bring about preservation of the British navy, then we could drop four-fifths of our preparation for defense.

4 American Ambulance Drivers In Nazi Prison Pine for Home

While Other Prisoners Get Pay U. S. Natives Get None; But One Does All Right—Even Wants 'To Shoot Craps' With Reporter

By the Associated Press

Elsterhorst Prison Camp, Germany, Aug. 16.—Four homesick American ambulance drivers, prisoners of war along with 30,000 others in this vicinity, spoke hopefully today of seeing the Statue of Liberty soon.

Expecting their freedom momentarily—it has been held up frequently because of technicalities—the four Americans, quartered in a section reserved for French officers, while away the hours while most of their fellow prisoners work.

They are Albert Raymond, 52, chemical engineer, of New York; Louis Wherle, 44, Paris hotel operator, formerly of Fort Wayne, Ind.; Murray Shipley, 46, Paris businessman, formerly of Cincinnati, and Marcus Clark, 35, Chicago motion picture worker. Clark drove an ambulance in Poland, the others in France.

"We are all in good health here and are well treated, although you can be a prisoner under the best circumstances possible and still be unhappy," said Raymond.

"We feel more like transient guests," Raymond explained. "I just play dominoes, chess, backgammon and wash my clothes and eat and sleep." While other soldiers and officers held in prison camps draw their regular pay—which is checked back to the vanquished nations they represent, the Americans receive no pay because the United States is not at war.

"If America should go to war, of course these American prisoners would start drawing pay," a German officer explained.

Raymond said he was doing all right. He displayed some prison currency, and asked:

"Wouldn't you like to shoot some craps?"

Raymond said that on the morning of May 15 near Soissons "we ran into some Germans who were headed for Paris, hell bent for leather.

"We had heard some machine-gun fire ahead, and pulled to the side of the road. Some bicyclists told us some German parachutists had been surrounded and were being captured, so I reconnoitered a little—and reconnoitered right into the German army."

He and Wherle were captured there, but Shipley wandered about between the opposing forces for two days before the Germans seized him.

Firemen to Study Sabotage Defense

National defense aspects of firemen's work in combating sabotage will be stressed at the annual four-day course for Maryland firemen at the University of Maryland beginning September 3, it was announced yesterday.

Special Agent F. G. McIntyre, of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will open the session with a talk on "Sabotage and Its Relation to the Fire Service," before the fire chiefs.

Deputy State fire marshals will spend one day in discussing problems of sabotage, incendiarism and kindred subjects. Other subjects to be examined will cover varied problems encountered in firefighting work.

Instructors will include Harry "Smoky" Rogers, of Chicago; Harry H. Wolff, of Chicago Fire Department; Chief Robert Tate, of Baltimore; Gifford T. Cook, of the International Association of Fire Chiefs, and C. G. Lauber, of the D. C. Fire Prevention Bureau.

Foreign Relations Group Approves Refugee Ship Bill

By the Associated Press

Unanimous approval by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee cleared the way yesterday for final action on an amendment to the Neutrality Act which would permit American ships to bring child refugees from European war zones.

The committee acted after making minor changes in legislation already approved by the House.

As reported to the Senate, the measure would permit American ships to enter combat zones and bring out children under 16 years of age provided they had sponsors in this country who would guarantee that they would not become public charges.

The House had imposed a requirement that the sponsor be liable for support of a refugee child on the same basis as his own children.

British Need U. S. Aid, President Told

The British people are determined to win and they are doing more damage to the Germans than Hitler's forces are to the English, Sir George Paish, British economist commented here tonight after a meeting with President Roosevelt.

Reasonable assistance from the United States, and keeping open Britain's waterways are foremost in the minds of British leaders, he commented.

Aside from domestic defense and supply problems, England, he said, is using and protecting a considerable portion of French, Dutch and Belgian shipping. Fifty over-age destroyers would be of great value to Britain and aid in its convoy work, he commented.

50 Patrol Leaders To Be Graduated

Fifty captains and lieutenants of School Safety Patrols in District colored schools will be graduated today from the first summer training camp held for the children's patrol leaders in Washington.

The youths have been attending the colored Y. M. C. A. Camp Lichtman, near Annapolis, Md., during the past week. Among subjects included in the training courses are standard patrol rules, care of equipment and duties of patrol members.

A second camp for officers of patrol in white schools of the District and nearby areas will be held August 31 through September 9. The camps are sponsored by the American Automobile Association, the Metropolitan Police and the District Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Muriel Maddox Makes Her Bow At Mammoth Ball in Newport

Washington Bud Blossoms Into Society At One of Resort's Outstanding Parties, Held at the Family's Summer Home

By Hope Ridings Miller.

AT ONE OF NEWPORT'S outstanding fetes of the season a Washington bud last evening blossomed into society.

She is Miss Muriel Maddox, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Charles Hamilton Maddox, and the party was a mammoth ball given at the Maddox' summer home, Easterly.

A color scheme of blue and silver was carried out in the decorations, both indoors and out in the garden where a large marquee was built for dancing. A border of blue and white blossoms edged the dance floor, which was encircled with a series of terraces on which there were a number of tables. The beech and apple trees on the estate were flooded with indirect lighting that also cast a soft glow on the ocean, visible from the upper terrace.

Meyer Davis' Orchestra played for dancing, while Cliff Hall played the piano and sang for guests who gathered in the game room.

Mrs. Maddox and her daughter received in the drawing room. The debutante was gowned in a bouffant frock of white net, designed by Norman Hartnell. Her bouquet was of gardenias. Mrs. Maddox had chosen a gown of pale blue marganza, set off with a corsage of gardenias.

After greeting the hostess and the debutante, guests went on down the white wide stairway into the garden below, where dancing began at an early hour and continued until the not-so-early hours this morning. A supper was served at midnight.

Washington Debs Among House Guests

Several hundred attended the party. Among Miss Maddox's house guests were Miss Cynthia Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, and Miss Sita Finkenstaedt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt, of Washington; Miss Betty Golsan, of Richmond, Va.; Miss Elizabeth Sears, of Boston; James Hilton, of Greenwich, Conn.; Alfred Coyle and John Rogers, of New York; Charles Codman, of Boston, and John Keller, of Washington.

In the Washington contingent on hand for the party were Miss Eleanor Flood, Miss Peggy Townsend, the Misses Eugenia and Rosemary Merrill and Keith Merrill, jr., Miss Alice Barry, Miss Elaine Darlington, Miss Zeva Fish, Miss Barbara Beale, Mrs. William T. Mann, Admiral and Mrs. Stanford C. Hooper, Mrs. Wallach Merriam and Charles J. Kappler.

Many There From Out of Town

Others there from out of town were Miss Harriet Aldrich, Richard Blaine, Thomas Ennis, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Grove, Bolling Haxall, Ray Herrman, jr., D. Willis James, Joseph Kavanagh, L. L. Lorillard, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Donald MacRae, William S. Moore, Edward Patterson, Harold Van Husen and Miss Rosemary Warburton, all of New York; William Bodine and Livingston Biddle, jr., of Philadelphia; Henry Burnham 2d, of Bolton, Mass.; Benjamin, Samuel and John Chew and Miss Isabel Paul, of Radnor, Pa.; Frederick L. Rockefeller, of Greenwich, Conn.; Frederick Herter, of Boston, and Miss Geraldyn Redmond, of Locust Valley, Long Island.

Capt. and Mrs. Maddox and their daughter will return to their home on Belmont road next month.

Dance to Honor June Noble

The former Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Edward J. Noble have set Friday, September 13, as the date of the supper dance they will give in honor of their debutante daughter, Miss June Noble. The party will take place at the Noble estate, Lochwold on Round Hill Road, Greenwich, Conn.

Miss Noble, who will enter Sarah Lawrence College in the fall, attended Greenwich Academy and the Ethel Walker School, and was graduated from Holton Arms School here.

According to present plans Miss Noble and Miss Barbara Mallory will spend the remainder of the summer at Tepee Lodge, in Sheridan, Wyo. They went there recently after flying to San Francisco with Mr. Noble. The latter spoke before the foreign trade convention at the Palace Hotel.

Mrs. Cowell Gives Dinner to Honor Erwin Piscators

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Piscator were the honor guests at a dinner given by Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell last evening in her home on Tracy place.

Mr. Piscator will direct the Washington Civic Theater next winter. Mrs. Piscator is known professionally as Maria Ley, the French actress. In recent years she has given up the stage to devote her time to writing and teaching.

Guests at the dinner included the Commandant of the Navy Yard and Mrs. George T. Pettengill, the Finnish Military Attache, Col. Per Zilliacus; Yrjo Saastamoinen, noted Finnish diplomat, who is visiting here; Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Waggaman Pulver, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Horan, Mr. and Mrs. Lee D. Butler, Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Rutherford, Merritt Swift, John Logan, Charles Hume, Wolcott Waggaman and several others.

Britain's Envoy Cancels Trip

Lord Lothian, British Ambassador, was to have spent this week-end in Lenox, Mass., but had to cancel his trip and is remaining in Washington.

The envoy had planned to be present at a concert last night of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which is conducting the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox. Proceeds went to British relief organizations. Lord Lothian was represented at the concert by Sir Louis Beale, former British commissioner general to the New York World's Fair.

Mrs. Hurja Plans Westchester Trip

Mrs. Emil Hurja hopes to leave about the first of next month for a motor trip through Westchester County, N. Y., and other northern towns.

Mrs. Hurja usually leaves Washington early every summer, but this season has stayed on to raise money for the Finnish orphans committee, of which she is Washington chairman.

Gertrude Good Will Come Home This Week-End

Miss Gertrude Good, who, with a group of her Vassar classmates, has been teaching at Chautauqua Lake, N. Y., for the last six weeks, will return this week-end. She will be with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Good, at their home in Spring Valley.

The Goods have had as their house guest for several weeks Herbert Hoover, jr., of Canton, Ohio, whose engagement to Miss Carl Good was announced last Christmas. Miss Betty Good, another daughter, celebrated her seventeenth birthday recently with a dinner party at the Columbia Country Club.

Return to Washington From Florida Resort

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Henry Albers have returned from Vero Beach, Fla., where they spent several weeks.

They were guests of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Earmon.

Miss Askanazy Back in Capital

Miss Natalie Askanazy, honorary attache of the Polish Embassy, has returned to Washington from New York, where she went to meet her parents, who are refugees from Europe. Her father, a businessman; her mother, and a young brother were in Vichy when the war broke out, but fled that town after France fell. After a difficult trip over French roads filled with thousands of other refugees, they reached Lisbon and found passage on a ship.

Miss Askanazy brought her brother back with her to Washington, where she is occupying the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cotton in Georgetown while they are away. Her mother is ill in a New York hospital at the moment but after she has recovered she and her husband hope to take up residence in Cuba.

Wheelers Fete Newlyweds

Mr. and Mrs. George Y. Wheeler gave a cocktail party yesterday at their apartment, 2540 Massachusetts avenue, in honor of Miss Betty Fischer and Grant Boss, who will be married on Wednesday. Guests were members of the wedding party and a few other friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler, who were themselves married less than two months ago, will leave shortly for a vacation at Virginia Beach.

Evening Gowns Give Figure Acid Test; Wearers Should Train by Exercise

Most Women Either Scrawny In Shoulders or Popover Type

By Ida Jean Kain

IT'S THE stark truth that bathing suits and evening gowns make a good figure look better, a bad one worse. Of the two, and evening gown is the more merciless because it puts you on dress parade. But the way you look in your bathing suit is a fair preview of the way you are going to look in your evening gown.

In a roomful of women "dressed to kill," really good figures are scarce. The masculine consensus is there should be a regulation requiring more material! Any time an exquisite creature with lovely arms and gleaming shoulders appears on the scene, she creates a sensation. She stands out so in that roomful of bad figures that she is apt to get herself talked about.

The trouble with most figures is they're either slim through the middle with scrawny arms and shoulders, or they are the popover style. It would be hard to say which is less attractive.

Rowing Recommended

Take a critical view of your figure in a bathing suit—and get busy with the exercises that will perfect your decolletage! If you are lucky enough to be able to swim regularly this summer, that's the de luxe exercise—it makes for softly rounded contours while slimming you down. But if you don't swim and you are at a beach or lake, row a boat—every morning. Rowing is almost as good as swimming for your figure.

If you can't row or swim, get a stretching bar or a medicine ball. Both afford just the type of exercise the average figure needs. They beautify the arms and shoulders, straighten the back and pull you slim through the middle.

Have the stretching bar adjusted so that you can reach it easily when standing on tiptoes. This height allows for a good stretch but prevents any strain on the abdominal organs. Try to make most of the pull come through the shoulders.

Variety of Exercises

From the bar, a variety of exercises can be taken. Swing one leg rhythmically out in front, and up in back. Although the swing of the legs is not high, it is excellent for toning the muscles of the lower abdomen and the buttocks. Then hold the leg out in front and swing it from side to side. As another exercise, flex alternate knees and bring them high up toward the chest. As you stretch on the bar, tip the head slightly back to beautify the throat contour.

One of the best of the medicine ball exercises is to keep tossing it overhead, never allowing the ball to fall lower than the crown of the head. This is marvelous exercise for the arms, shoulders and throat—you have to tip your head back to watch the ball. A 4-pound medicine ball is the best weight for most women.

Lacking a medicine ball or a bar, do the simple exercise of making big and little circles with the arms, holding them straight out from the shoulders and moving them at the shoulder girdle. Always make the circles backward.

Ingenuity Most Important Item In Fixing Home

Collection of Odds And Ends Can Be Charming Decorations

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

WHETHER you have lots or little to spend, ingenuity is still the most important ingredient in furnishing a home. Without it the most imposing array of furniture in your home will probably look like a show window, except display. With it a collection of odds and ends can be made into charming decorations. We hope most of our friends can strike a happy medium with "something old and something new"—like the home of a neighbor we called on recently.

The living room and dining room had their walls painted in soft celadon green, their floors carpeted in a textural mulberry broadloom, their windows curtained with a flowered chintz on a soft gray-green ground. Against this background light walnut Queen Anne chairs and a Queen Anne secretary and incidental tables for the living room were complemented by upholstered chairs in the flowered chintz, with a sofa in a deeper olive green.

Purchased Unpainted

In the dining room Queen Anne chairs and table were ensembled with a pair of plain chests which the lady of this house used in place of a buffet (as a matter of fact, there weren't any buffets in Queen Anne's day). When purchased, these chests were unpainted furniture. The hostess painted them in two shades of gray-green from celadon to olive green, using a horizontal scroll design and painting with great care so that the chests in themselves are works of art.

In her "front" bedroom a handsome mahogany highboy represented the main furniture investment. Ensembled with it were twin poster beds, made of two studio couches with poster frames built by the man of the family. A wall bracket shelf between the beds served in place of a night table. These frames and the bracket were painted in dusty pink to match the walls, while the poster frames were draped in a flowered chintz on a cream ground.

The same chintz, used for bedspread, curtains, dressing table skirt and chair cover, gave the impression that the room was quite well filled.

Wally Deserves Rank as Leader For Styles

Duchess Appraised On Bermuda Arrival; Gems Are 'Trade-Mark'

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

FOR A FEW DAYS this week the fashion interest of the world was centered in Bermuda. The Duchess of Windsor, America's contribution to international fashions, stayed just long enough on the island to be appraised by the natives. On the whole they agreed that she deserves her style leadership title.

MARSHALL ADAMS

From Bermuda has come the report that of all things worn by Wally, most admiration was accorded her jewels. Her fondness for diamonds is well known, in fact the numerous sparkling gifts from the duke were important reasons for her appointment two years ago as first among the world's ten best dressed women. She is partial to earrings and lapel pins, three sets of which she exhibited during her first two days on the island.

Wore Leaf of Diamonds

For her arrival in Bermuda, Wally wore an unusual leaf of diamonds veined in brilliant jewels and clipped to the lapel of her pink and blue crepe dress and royal blue coat. Her predisposition to jewels was seen also in the skull cap of opalescent pearls worn far back on her dark hair parted in the center and rolled off the face.

Jewels were apparent again during the Windsors' visit to the Government House, where, attired in a gleaming white sharkskin suit, the duchess displayed sunburst earrings and a lapel pin of diamonds and rubies. For Sunday morning church services in Bermuda, she chose more modest jewels, earrings and a large shoulder flower of pearls and turquoise with a brown and dark-blue print.

Though fortunate in possessing a rare and costly collection of stones, good taste is characteristic of the duchess' use of them. She shows restraint in never wearing more than two, possibly three, pieces of custom-designed and crafted gems. She never makes the mistake of blazing forth in numerous unrelated pieces, just because she has them.

Almost a Trade Mark

However, with almost every costume are the inevitable earrings, almost as much a Windsor trademark as the hair part, the smile and the mole. She is responsible for popularizing the earbob and earclip, both winged and circular, and very becoming to any sleek, vivid type.

Women of lean features, severe coiffures and general sophistication might do well to emulate the wearing of earrings, for they are an important adjunct to this fall's quiet, lady-like clothes. Many earrings curve gracefully, follow the line of the ear, often cover the lobe. Most original of this variety is a pair on shell designs, paved with diamonds and set with a single pearl apiece—adaptable even to a commoner's salary in paste stones.

Jeweled Chic

At Hamilton, Bermuda, the Duchess of Windsor pauses in her rounds of visits long enough to be photographed in her chic single-breasted sharkskin suit. The piping is navy blue soutache, an accent which points out her original collection of jewels, in this case a 4-inch flamingo pin of rubies, emeralds and diamonds, with winged ear clips to match, and a modest green and white gold bracelet, worn by the duchess with all sport clothes

Breakfast Platter Blends Color And Flavor

A triumphant breakfast platter, both flavorsome and attractive, that will make family or guests take notice is one built around sugar-cured pork. Sugar-cured pork, the kind in the red can, all ready to eat, is simple to prepare. Slices of this meat can be browned underneath the broiler, while eggs and tomatoes, with a difference can be baked.

To make this breakfast dish, hollow out medium-sized tomatoes, season with salt and pepper. Drop an egg into the hollows of the tomatoes, and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees until eggs are firm, about 15 to 20 minutes. Place the egg-filled tomatoes down the center of a platter, and flank with slices of the broiled ham.

With a fruit starter, some crispy toast or other hot bread, and plenty of good hot coffee, and the ham-tomato-egg dish, nothing else is needed to insure a successful breakfast. Of course, hot muffins are always appreciated for a breakfast bread, and would go fine in this particular meal.

Man Likens This Column to Candle Shedding Beam In Naughty World; Rebuts 'M. T.'s Criticism

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Having just read the cracks made by "T. M." about your writing style, may I violate a cardinal principle of mine and take this means of assuring you that your column is as carefully balanced, well rounded and sane as anyone could possibly write.

You are pounding against a deadline. You have the practical, spiritual, moral, physical and, above all, the mental welfare of your readers at heart. You must draw a very fine line between measured boldness and being a "fire ball" consultant. You must handle the sensitive delicacy of the soul with tender firmness and whack with logical literary precision the backsides of the social scamps.

Whether you recognize it or not, people lean upon you for spiritual strength and look up to you for physical courage. You are, in short, a candle shedding its tiny beam in a damned naughty world. Your responsibility is tremendous, for, whether you like it or not, you are shaping human lives with your advice. Oviously—in any man's language—you have a tough job. You do it exceedingly well.

You turn out a column that has sense, punch, humor, pathos and often that long view which persons close up against their problems can't see. If "T. M." thinks it so easy to knock out such a column, let "T. M." try. Best wishes and the best of luck.

NEWSPAPER MAN.

How Announce Wedding Months After Ceremony?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married since May, but because I was a little abashed at first about being married, I did not publish the event. Since then I have learned that my husband is very much offended because I didn't acknowledge it, as I should have done. His home is in another town, where there are some who don't yet know that he is married. Do you think it is too late to announce the wedding? If not, please tell me how to word a suitable announcement.

HEDWIG.

Bride's Parents Give Statement to Newspapers

DEAR HEDWIG: It isn't too late to announce your wedding through the newspapers. Occasionally one does see such announcements, months after the marriage was made. Customary procedure is to issue the statement in the name of the bride's parents, as, for instance: "Mr. and Mrs. James John Blank announce the marriage of their daughter, Jane Ann, to Mr. William Brown Doe, on May 15, 1940, at New York City in the Little Church Around the Corner."

Sometimes this announcement is amplified by telling the newlyweds' place of residence, reviewing their ancestral and educational backgrounds, and reporting the bridegroom's business or professional affiliation. Whether or not this is done depends variously on your preference, the newspaper's wishes and the respective families' social prestige.

If the bride's family lives in one city, and the bridegroom's family in another town, usually the statement is sent to newspapers in both towns, for simultaneous release. An enterprising and cooperative editor might prefer the device of publishing the bride's latest photograph as a young matron, with this type of caption: "Mrs. William Brown Doe, who was Miss Jane Ann Blank before her marriage on May 15. Mr. and Mrs. Doe are making their home in Baltimore, where Mr. Doe is practicing law. Mrs. Doe is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James John Blank, of this city."

This tells the story, while lifting it out of the classification of obviously stale comment. But since space is at a premium on most newspapers, and the publication of photographs a costly process, one could not promise you any such service in this instance. I mention it merely as a possibility, and as a sometime newspaper practice.

Are Shower Gifts Kept After Broken Engagement?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have just recently broken my engagement and am rather confused on one detail: What is the correct thing to do regarding shower gifts? My instinct tells me they should be returned, but most of my friends say they should not be returned. Please be kind enough to advise me in the matter.

BEWILDERED.

Here's One Vote in Favor Of Returning Them

DEAR BEWILDERED: I don't happen to know of any social ruling governing your question; but my instinctive belief coincides with yours. The "shower gifts" were given on the theory that they would be conveniences or adornments to your projected new household. With the cancellation of that plan, you have no use for and no proper claim upon them—it seems to me. While your friends (who doubtless gave them to you) may urge you to keep them, and might even feel temporarily at a loss to know what to do with them, if they were returned—nevertheless I imagine you would gain in their estimate if you redistributed them among the donors, with a rueful note (or remark) of combined appreciation and apology.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

A white lace scarf shot with gold is worn like a mantilla over her head.

Today's Health Talk

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Prompt Care Is Advisable for Dog-Bite; Anmial Should Be Kept Under Observation

MAD DOG scares are likely to be prevalent just now, although they may occur any time of year. Naturally it is a time of great emotional stress and calm common sense is at a premium.

Rabies is not a very contagious disease for man and there are plenty of records of humans having been bitten, taken no treatment, and never having developed the disease. A valuable report from Birmingham, Ala., shows that Negroes are quite indifferent about it and seldom apply for treatment, and yet there have been no deaths from rabies for five years in Birmingham.

The germ of rabies gets into the saliva and hence the mouth of a rabid animal is always full of the contagious matter. When the dog bites another animal or a human being the virus is carried into the wound and is carried by the blood stream to the nervous system. The animal in the later stages is paralyzed and seldom bites, but the saliva may be slobbered in a cut or scratch on the hand.

The most important thing to do after an animal has bitten or otherwise infected a human being is to see that the animal's carcass is taken to a responsible veterinary or health department pathologist. It is by no means best to kill the animal, but put it under observation for 10 days or two weeks. If typical symptoms develop, treatment of humans who were exposed need not be further delayed. Typical changes in the nervous system can be seen under the microscope — the so-called negri bodies. Unless the animal is prepared and examined there is no basis whatever for arriving at a judgment of whether preventive inoculation should be done or not.

For actual bites or scratches made by the teeth or claws, treatment is always advisable. In the case of bites above the shoulders or multiple lacerations treatment should be begun immediately and can be discontinued if the animal proves not to be rabid. For most, however, it is usually safe to delay treatment until a definite diagnosis can be made When children have had intimate contact with an animal that later becomes rabid, treatment is advisable even if no open sore or bite is present.

Treatment is not advised following contamination of old cuts, sores or abrasions; "pinches" in which the skin is broken but the clothing neither torn nor penetrated; handling, eating with, sleeping with or kissing any animal which is living 14 days from the time of such contact; bites from fleas from rabid animals.

The case where judgment is difficult are nervous people who have an exaggerated dread of rabies and who have done no more than handle the rope of the animal which afterwards went rabid. For such cases it is best to acquiese and give the treatment.

'War Boom' Marked In Sale of Home Furniture, Rugs

A strangely paradoxical year is this with the civilized world apparently facing cataclysm, while business embarks on what promises to be a banner season. And the boom is in peaceful things like furniture and rugs and curtains, the last things one would expect to see prospering in war times. We make no effort to explain or interpret, but we merely report as news the fact that people are buying things for their homes. And styles for homes, as if to offset the dreary picture of the world at large, are brilliant, scintillating, provocative.

Correlated carpet colorings for adjoining rooms suggest such combinations as raspberry-pink carpet for one room and mulberry for the other; or a beige carpet in one room and an old gold for the adjoining room; or powder blue in one room and a deeper French blue in the other.

Exotic Dishes Made From Eggplant

EGGPLANT, with its richly colored and polished peel, has a touch of the exotic in appearance and flavor. It's actually Asiatic in origin. In India it is roasted in an ash fire, then peeled and chopped with onion, chillies, lemon juice and mustard oil. In Turkey it is served as a puree with bits of lamb roasted on skewers.

The Oriental recipes for eggplant, however, are too highly seasoned for our everyday use. But eggplant may be served a variety of ways that are sure to please the Western palate. Here are some recipes for cooking it:

French-Fried Eggplant

Cut into ¼-inch slices; sprinkle each with salt, stack, and place a plate on top as a weight. Let stand at least one-half hour. Drain, wipe each slice dry. Dip in seasoned flour, then in slightly beaten egg, and then in fine dry bread crumbs. Fry in deep fat or shallow pan fry, in hot fat, until slices are crisp and brown. Place in hot pan on piece of absorbent paper to drain. Serve on hot platter, with slices arranged to overlap.

Spanish Eggplant

Cut a whole eggplant in half, lengthwise. Blanch in boiling water for 10 minutes. Remove pulp, leaving a shell ½-inch thick. Saute 1 chopped onion in 2 tablespoons olive oil until tender, but not browned. Add 1 cup well-drained canned tomatoes and chopped eggplant pulp; continue cooking, stirring constantly, for 10 minutes. Combine with 1 cup fine dry bread crumbs. Drain eggplant shells, sprinkle inside with salt and pepper and stuff with mixture. Top with ⅓ cup fine dry bread crumbs mixed with 2 tablespoons melted butter. Put into baking dish, and bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, about 20 minutes, or until crumbs have browned.

Smooth Manner Is Best Aid To Popularity

TO MAKE slips in etiquette and never know it—so often that's the fate of the girl unused to dating.

Even a leisurely soda at the drug store may be her Waterloo. Time ticks on, her beau grows uncomfortable — and she never realizes it's the girl's place to suggest going home. At parties, too, she embarrasses her escort by waiting for him to speak of leaving. Soon she will wonder why boys shy away from her!

Yet, by checking on etiquette beforehand, any girl could carry off a date with the air of a princess.

So self-assured you feel if you know when to take the lead, when to let your escort do it. At the movies you go first at the ticket entrance, your beau follows with the tickets. If there is no usher he precedes you down the aisle, but you go first into the row. At the soda fountain or restaurant, you tell your escort what you'd like and he gives the order.

Or, at a formal dance, how it bolsters up your ego to know the sophisticated thing. On arriving, greet your hostess with "Good evening, Mrs. Gardner," then have your first dance with your beau.

Returning home from a date, never thank the man for a good time. Just put a lot of warmth into your voice when you say, "That was great fun." But don't make the mistake of asking, "When shall I see you again?" Let him do that.

And, when dates come thick and fast, you thank your lucky stars you investigated our 40-page booklet, ETIQUETTE FOR THE TEENS. Gives you sophisticated manners for movies, dances, dates; when dining, visiting, entertaining, motoring. Helps you solve the puzzling petting problems.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, ETIQUETTE FOR THE TEENS, to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS and the NAME of booklet.

Barefoot Exercise

Hollywood, Calif.—Another hint for the beach this summer comes from Olivia de Havilland, who finds that walking barefoot in the sand is the best exercise in the world for the arches and for slimming the legs and thighs. Sand hiking necessitates pulling the legs up high, which acts on the muscles not exercised in ordinary walking.

Boys Happiest In Rooms They Decorate Alone

A boy's room, like his pockets, should be largely his own business. In other words, a cute picture room might be your idea for him, but how would he like to live in such a scene? We often think that a mother should provide little beyond a comfortable bed, a big table, a chest of drawers, a chair or two. Leaving the decorative motif to the boy himself, letting it change as he does, reflecting each stage of his boyhood interests.

All this came to mind when we visited the home of a famous psychologist recently. His little son had a room that was very completely the boy's own creation. Plain cream walls and curtains, the essential furniture, a Navajo blanket bedspread and a Navajo rug—here was a scene that a boy could do things with.

A table tennis layout, covered with plain green oilcloth, served for his electric train tracks. An entire wall of built-in shelves provided him plenty of space for his "stuff," and on these shelves reposed all sorts of cars and balls and souvenirs and books.

The other walls at present are plastered with pennants, tennis rackets, baseball rotogravure clippings. Later he'll probably graduate to some other decorative design. But it will be his own idea—that's why he enjoys the room so much. He fixes it up to suit himself, does what he likes here, takes responsibility for cleaning it.

Another boy's room that appealed to us—and to its young geographically minded owner—had plastered walls finished with a good coat of white gloss enamel which was washable. The youngster was allowed to draw and paint maps (with opaque or tempera water colors) on the walls. These made brightly decorative patterns and helped keep this young man at the head of his class in geography and social science.

He altered his maps with each day's news (tempera colors can be removed with a wet sponge) and no harm done. For the rest of the room the furniture included a studio couch with a tweed cover and cushions covered with tweeds made of his father's old suits, a maple secretary desk, one easy chair.

Patric Claiborne Has Artist's Pride In Her Drawings of Patients' 'Innards'

Few women would envy Patric Claiborne her job, but she wouldn't exchange it for any other. She is a medical artist, associated with Doctors Hospital. She watches operations and makes drawings of them afterward for the use of surgeons.

Pat Claiborne

Or a doctor may request a picture of an unusual appendix he has removed from a patient. Her paintings and models are used to illustrate scientific articles, case histories, classroom lectures and exhibits.

Miss Claiborne prepared for her career by studying art, medicine, anatomy and surgery. She has stood beside so many operating tables that she no longer needs to take notes; she can draw the operations from memory. Frequently she is called to other hospitals.

The work has a fascination for her, even after ten years. She feels she is doing her share in the advancement of science. But she gets an esthetic pleasure from it, too. She'll pick up a drawing which would have little appeal for the average museum-goer. "Isn't it beautiful?" she'll say. "Just look at those colors!"

DOOR-TO-DOOR—A particularly aggressive magazine salesman had managed to get his foot in a prospective victim's door and was doing his best to convert her to his subscription plan. She was trying just as hard to get rid of him. Her husband, a witness to the proceedings, high-signed her to keep talking, and disappeared into the kitchen. A moment later, crawling to the door on his hands and knees, he let go with the hammer on the salesman's toe. Out went the foot, away went the salesman, and the household hasn't been bothered since.

The pleased passenger paid him double, and both felt happier for the experience.

Legal Agencies File Budgets For $441,582

All Five Estimates Show Increases, Ask For More Employes

Five branches of the District's legal and judicial departments yesterday submitted to the Commissioners individual budget estimates for 1942 totaling $441,582.

Budget of Judge Fay Bentley, of Juvenile Court, led the list with a request for $140,000, an increase of $37,310 over current appropriation.

Police Court asked $139,842, as compared with the present sum of $136,602.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal wants $127,620, $4,740 more than the present allotment.

The probation system requested $19,480, an increase of $1,800.

And Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the Board of Tax Appeals, asked for $14,840, a $600 increase.

Nine additional probation officers and four case supervisors to cope with an "accumulatively grave" situation at Juvenile Court were requested by Judge Bentley, who pointed out that six supervisors last year cared for 2,231 cases—or 381 cases each. She said each supervisor should carry about 150 cases and give more time to delinquents.

The increase of $4,740 requested by the corporation counsel would be used to employ three clerks. Morgan seeks a $300 increase in pay for each of his secretaries. Police Court's additional funds would employ an assistant financial clerk and an additional bailiff. The probation officer's salary would be increased by $1,500 and that of his assistant by $300.

D. C. Boys Club's Popularity Grows

The Boys Club of Washington shattered all of its previous attendance records during the month of July when an average daily attendance of 1,015 boys in the indoor and outdoor program was recorded, officials of the club announced last night.

A new high was set in baseball with 69 teams participating. Attendance in the swimming pool averaged 325. The total attendance for the month was 69,253 as compared with 55,181 in July of last year.

30 to Start Training For Alien Registry Job

A special force of 30 experienced postal employes will begin training Monday for their jobs in registering more than 7,000 District aliens.

The registrations will be held from August 27 to December 27 at the main postoffice, North Capitol street and Massachusetts avenue, and at 18 branch postoffices throughout the District.

Sample registration forms will be available in local postoffices Tuesday, Postmaster Vincent Burke announced yesterday. Aliens, including persons with first naturalization papers, are required to give information as to their occupations, political affiliations and services performed for foreign governments.

"Showers Saturday and Sunday. Slightly warmer Sunday. Monday and Tuesday generally fair and moderately warm, followed by light local showers and cooler Tuesday night or Wednesday."

This was the first five-day forecast issued by the Weather Bureau last night for Washington and the North and Middle Atlantic States. Behind the bureau's innovation of long-range forecasting lay a romantic story of lonely observers in Arctic wastes and distant tropic islands who help the Weather Bureau tell John Doe when to take his umbrella to work.

The long-range forecasts will be issued on Saturdays and Wednesdays for the United States and for every habitable section of land north of the equator throughout the world, Commander F. W. Reichelderfer, Bureau Chief, announced. Distribution will be by press and radio.

Weather data is wired from different parts of the globe to Washington and Boston, the two assembly points for the forecasts. While Weather Bureau officials state that the methods employed in reaching long-range forecasts are "complex," they state the basic principal is simple:

Atmospheric pressures are noted at observation posts throughout the Northern Hemisphere. The mean pressure for intermediate points are reached by arithmetic. Then, by a study of the varying pressures, general weather trends are concluded.

For large regions of this country a general and more technical forecast is worked out. Reichelderfer said while the new service is experimental, there is every reason to believe it would be successful.

Regional stations are:

Washington, for Middle Atlantic States, Ohio Valley and Tennessee; Boston, the New England area; Chicago, Great Lakes area, upper Mississippi Valley and northern plain States; Kansas City, Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma; New Orleans, central and east Gulf region and east Texas; Denver, Colorado, Montana and Wyoming; Salt Lake City, Utah; San Francisco, Far Western States; Albequerque, Arizona, New Mexico and west Texas.

Casualties Blamed On Slippery Streets

Slippery streets and poor visibility during yesterday's showers were blamed for traffic accidents which injured two pedestrians. Continued occassional showers and moderate temperatures were forecast for today.

Ernest R. Armstrong, 36, of 466 Massachusetts avenue northwest, was knocked down at Florida avenue and Eckington place northeast, when he stepped from a loading platform. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where doctors said he suffered a fractured left collarbone and cuts.

Mrs. Rose Marinakis, 41, of 1011 Seventh street northwest, was also treated at Casualty Hospital for bruises after she was struck by a streetcar at Seventh and P streets northwest. She was released from the hospital after receiving first aid.

Temperatures yesterday varied between 68 at 12:15 a. m. and 80 at 3 p. m.

Rain in Maryland was a "million-dollar" downpour to owners of hundreds of acres of cornfields, tomato patches and other vegetable lands which the August drouth threatened to destroy.

The Eastern Shore, Maryland's most productive vegetable section, received 1.2 inches of rain in the 36 hours up to late yesterday afternoon, according to the Associated Press. Wicomoco, Dorchester, Alleghany and Garrett Counties, in addition to widespread areas throughout the State, reported the rain a blessing to the corn and tomato crops.

Evidence Guild To Meet in Library, Franklin Parks

Francis H. Thornton, past president of the Catholic Evidence Guild, will have charge of its meeting in Franklin Park from 3 to 5 p. m. tomorrow. Other speakers will be Roland Murphy, Paul Hoban and Brian McCullough.

The Rev. A. J. McDonnell, C. S. P., as chairman of the meeting at the same time in Public Library Park, will introduce David Murphy, Mario Dittami, M. Scheuer and Gerard Benson. The meeting from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. in the Library Park will be directed by the Rev. William H. Russell, of Catholic University, with Miss Helen Connolly, Leo Foley and Richard Kinsella as other speakers.

The meeting in Franklin Park at the same time will be under the direction of Joseph Robeck, with speakers including Miss Elizabeth Raney, John McDonald and Eugene Bleakley. The public is invited to all meetings.

Auto-Theft Suspect Hurt In Span Leap

Suffers Broken Back In Plunge After Long Chase by Police

Thomas Van Pelt, 31, of Ardmore, Md., was under police guard at Casualty Hospital last night, with a fractured back suffered when he jumped from the Hyattsville, (Md.) Viaduct in a desperate attempt to escape arrest.

The injured man's leap climaxed an 80-mile-an-hour chase by Washington and Prince Georges County police at 3:30 a. m. yesterday and left a stolen sedan smashed against the bridge's guardrail.

Motorcycle Policeman C. H. Gould said he started in pursuit of a speeding automobile at New York avenue and Bladensburg road northeast, when he observed that the car bore no license plates. The driver outdistanced him, Gould said, and he stopped long enough to telephone ahead to Maryland police.

Taking up the chase again, Gould caught up with his quarry just as Prince Georges County Officers Earl J. Huber and Edwin R Thompson entered the race. At the viaduct, the speeding car failed to make a turn, hurtled over the curb and crashed against the concrete railing. The driver jumped from the car and over the rail, landing in a lumber yard below.

At the hospital, doctors said Van Pelt's condition was serious.

The automobile, police said, had been taken from a lot adjoining offices of an automobile sales company at Fourteenth and H streets northeast. The owner said the machine had only 10 miles on it before the chase started.

Rev. Dudley Recovering From Operation Here

The Rev. George Fiske Dudley, of Rumson, N. J., former pastor of St. Stephen's and Incarnation Church, was in good condition last night after an operation for an abdominal ailment at Garfield Hospital, physicians reported. The Rev. Mr. Dudley was admitted to the hospital Wednesday.

'No Publicity' Is White House Barber's Rule

Colored Servant Has Shorn All Presidents Since First Roosevelt

President Roosevelt's liking for "men with a passion for anonymity" should be amply satisfied by the man who cuts his hair.

This is a white-haired colored servant who has been about the White House since the days of Teddy Roosevelt, but who will not talk to reporters, confront photographers, and who requests that his name be not divulged.

Inquiries at the White House produce only the information that the veteran servant who has cut the hair of all the Presidents since early in the century has a philosophy about his job. And its first article is: No Publicity.

From the few shreds of evidence available about this invisible man it can be assumed that he would never be inspiration for jokes about talkative barbers. White House attendants make it plain that he does not sound off to the President about the European situation or analyze for him the strong and weak points of Wendell Willkie. He just cuts hair.

Came From Virginia Farm

The President's barber, it has been learned, is not a graduate of a barber's college, and is, therefore, no candidate for membership in a hair-trim trust. According to those who know him well, the unsung Figaro came to the Executive Mansion from a Virginia farm, began to do housework and somewhere along the line mastered the trade of barbering.

Many varied heads of hair—and hairless heads—have come under his ministrations.

There was Theodore Roosevelt, whose tousled, unruly mop of hair was the ancestor of Wendell Willkie's highly publicized hirsute equipment.

Next under the barber's scissoring came the enormous but thinly covered head of President Taft.

Woodrow Wilson's iron gray hair, a luxuriant growth coming down over the ears, changed almost to snow white with the press of World War worries.

The Harding Era

The Harding era was a contrast for the White House barber. Handsome Warren E. Harding's full crop of hair appeared as different from Wilson's as were the peace days of the early twenties from the shadows of 1914-1918.

Suddenly the brownish-red hair of Calvin Coolidge came under the care of the White House barber, followed by the sparse crop adorning the head of Herbert Clark Hoover.

President Roosevelt's hair, a generous growth of silky gray strands, is now under his care.

Who will be cutting President's Roosevelt's hair for the next four years?

That is the question the entire country would like to have answered, including, it may be assumed, an anoymous colored barber in the White House.

Gov. O'Conor's Dog Killed by Auto; Second in Year

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 16 (AP).—Tragedy struck at the Government House here today.

Robin, the small brown spaniel, owned by Gov. O'Conor and his family, was killed by an automobile on College avenue. The small dog had wiggled through the fence surrounding the Government House and dashed into the street.

Robin's predecessor, a spaniel who bore the same name, met a similar death a year or so ago.

7 Students Win Their CAA Wings, Awarded at Luncheon

Assistant Secretary of Commerce Hinckley Calls Them 'Symbol' of Defense Program; Postponed Competition Set for Today

Seven young pilots who got their wings in the CAA training program were told here yesterday that the Government will rely strongly upon their kind in national defense.

"Much of America's hope for a great defense force with wings—a force strong enough to frighten off at best, or battle off at worst, any threats to the freedom we prize—rests with the training program of which you have become the symbol," the pilots were told by Assistant Secretary of Commerce Robert H. Hinckley. He spoke at a luncheon in the Mayflower Hotel, attended by several hundred associated with aviation.

He described the CAA enterprise as a success, one that "has shown that with our democratic system we can compete with the dictators of the world."

Tarkio College Gets Award

Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, Chief of the Air Corps, another speaker, said the Army was watching closely the CAA training program to see how the pilots will best fit in. He reminded that neither pilots nor production plants can be made overnight and that aviation no more is thought of in terms of hundreds of planes but in thousands.

Maj. James H. Doolittle, ace pilot and president of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences, announced award of the Shell Intercollegiate Aviation Trophy to Tarkio College, Tarkio, Mo. This was for establishing the most proficient record for the year in the training of pilots participating in the CAA program. Each of the competing pilots was presented with a wrist watch on behalf of the institute.

Contest Delayed

The pilots waited through another overcast day for clear weather and the holding of the final contest when one of their number will win the top scholarship award of $1,000. Weather permitting, the contest will be held today. The Shell Oil Co. financed the competition and the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences sponsors it.

The competing pilots are John Lincoln Lambert, 20, 3205 Juneau place, Baltimore, student at Maryland University; Jefferson Davis Lewis, 21, Tallahassee, Fla.; Edward Francis Scanlon, Steubenville, Ohio; James Grant White, 23, Brownwood, Tex.; Arden Ellwood Dixson, Wichita, Kan.; Waldo Emerson Schroeder, 22, Reedley, Calif., and Barbara Jane Erickson, 20, Seattle, Wash.

160 Girls Leave For Police Boys Camp Today

6 Buses to Take Group to Scotland, Return With Youths

One hundred and sixty girls leave today at 8 a. m. for a two-week stay at the Metropolitan Police Boys Club camp at Scotland, Md. It is the first time girls will use the camp facilities.

Six buses will take the girls from the starting point at the Fifth Precinct, Fifth and E streets southeast, to the camp and return with about 200 boys now at camp.

Selected by the 45 social agencies of the city, the girls range in ages from 10 to 15 years and have never experienced camp life before. Miss Sibyl Baker, director of the community centers and leader of a recent move to provide Washington with a girls' club movement, is in charge.

On hand today to see the girls leave will be Police Chief Ernest W. Brown, who founded the camp and offered its use this year to the girls; Morris Cafritz, head of the boys club board and James Colliflower, a member of the board.

A full complement of camp councilors will accompany the girls, who will be given a thorough physical checkup this morning before the trip. The Police Boys Club will supply the maintenance staff, doctor, nurse, kitchen staff and food for 200 during the two-week camp.

D. C.-Manassas Train Changes Are Authorized

Richmond, Va., Aug. 16 (AP).—The Southern Railway today received authorization from the State corporation commission to discontinue trains 11 and 12 between Washington and Manassas and to adjust the schedules of these two trains between Harrisonburg and Manassas.

Under the new plan train No. 11 will leave Washington at 8:30 a. m., arrive at Manassas at 9:28 a. m., leave there at 9:45 a. m. and arrive at Harrisonburg at 1:40 p. m.

On the return trip train 12 will leave Harrisonburg at 2:15 p. m., arrive at Manassas at 6:05 p. m. and there transfer to train 36, leaving Manassas at 6:22 p. m. and arriving at Washington at 7:25 p. m.

U. S. Jobs Total To Be Boosted By Defense

10,000 More Federal Workers Expected In D. C. by Oct. 1

Speeded defense preparations in Washington are expected to boost Government employment here by 10,000 persons, according to officials who have to find space for the extra job holders to work.

The 10,000 increase, it was estimated, would cover the period from June 1 to October 1 approximately and boost the total of Government job holders in the District close to the 140,000 mark.

The estimate was made in a special report prepared by Clay J. Guthridge, director of space control in Government buildings, for W. E. Reynolds, public buildings commissioner.

Although no breakdown of the jobs was available, official's said, the estimate was based on reports from War and Navy Departments, the Civil Service Commission and other agencies. It compared with earlier estimates which placed the increase in Government jobs expected under the defense programs between 5,000 and 30,000.

Last count of the increase in Federal jobs in Washington was prepared by the Civil Service Commission for June, showing that nearly 3,000 new employes went to work here during the month, a rise of 3.4 per cent above the May total. There were 133,823 Government workers in the District at the end of June.

Falls Church Man Held On $4 Holdup Charges

Harvey Flowers, colored, of Falls Church, was ordered held for action of the grand jury in Alexandria on a charge of holdup and robbery and possession of a concealed weapon, after a preliminary hearing before Judge James R. Duncan.

Flowers was arrested on the complaint of James Williams, colored, also of Falls Church, that he was held up and robbed of $4. A .32-caliber automatic pistol and a box of bullets were taken from the suspect, police said.

Justice Dept. Studies Bill On Pandering

Curran Completes Measure to Plug Legal Loophole

District Attorney Edward M. Curran has sent to the Department of Justice the draft of a bill to plug a loophole in the law through which panderers have been able to escape justice in Washington.

The proposed amendment to the present criminal code will shortly be transmitted to Congress, where Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, has promised support in obtaining early action.

Justice James M. Proctor, of the District Court, urged that the law be brought up to date last June, when he was obliged to order the release of a waiter in a resort in Ninth street northwest. A 17-year-old girl had testified that this waiter made appointments for her with men for the purpose of prostitution and later collected part of her earnings. His attorney contended successfully that the law did not provide punishment for such acts.

District Attorney Curran, Assistant District Attorney Krouse and other prosecutors drafted an amendment to remedy the situation. This was studied by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal and is now being analyzed by the Department of Justice. After the customary reference to the Budget Bureau the Attorney General will send the proposal to Congress.

Funeral Services Today for School Cafeteria Manager

Funeral services for Mrs. Emilie K. MacDonald, 60, 7814 Falkland Drive, Silver Spring, Md., manager of the cafeteria at Powell Junior high school in Washington for 15 years, who died Sunday in Helena, Mont., will be held today at 1 p. m. at the S. H. Hines Funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in National Park Cemetery, Riggs road, Md.

Ill only a few days, Mrs. MacDonald was visiting her daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Marshall, whom she accompanied West about a month ago, when Mrs. Marshall and the latter's husband moved there. Born in Germany, Mrs. MacDonald came to Washington 25 years ago from Boston. She was a resident of Silver Spring for four years, making her home with Mrs. Marshall and another daughter, Miss Elise MacDonald. She is also survived by three sisters, Mrs. Ella McGowan, Rochester, N. Y.; Mrs. William H. Staudenmayer, Washington, and Mrs. Edmund A. Moeglin, Linfield, Mass.

Drowned Newsboy's Body Is Recovered

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 16.—The body of Tommy Hart, 12-year-old newspaper carrier who disappeared off the steamer Yorktown in mid-Chesapeake Bay last week-end, was returned today to his home in Williamsport, Pa. The body was recovered late yesterday near a beach in this vicinity.

The youth, who was on a cruise sponsored by a Williamsport newspaper, was believed to have fallen overboard while sleepwalking.

Feller Beats Browns, 8 to 3, for 21st Victory

Tribe Widens League Lead To 3 Games

Speedballer Touched For 12 Hits, Strikes Out Three; Anker, Trotter Pounded

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 16.—The St. Louis Browns pounded Bob Feller for six hits and two runs in the first two innings today, but the Cleveland ace then settled down and wound up posting his twenty-first victory of the year. The 8-to-3 triumph enabled the Indians to widen their first-place lead over Detroit to three games.

Feller allowed 12 hits and fanned three batters, running his season strikeout total to 200. The victory was the Tribe's fifth in a row.

A ladies' day crowd of 12,000 saw the Redskins blast the offerings of Elden Auker and Bill Trotter for 13 hits, including triples by Roy Weatherly and Ben Chapman. Auker, who retired in the eighth for a pinch hitter, was charged with the defeat, his ninth of the season against the same number of victories.

Rip Radcliff, the league's leading batter, led the attack against Feller with four singles. He scored in the first as Wally Judnich and Harold Clift followed with safe blows, and in the second his one-base blow drove in Don Heffner. The last St. Louis run came in the seventh on another hit by Radcliff, Judnich's sharp single and an infield out.

Feller, who has lost six games, had good control throughout and walked only one man.

The Indians picked up single runs in the first two innings, but their real attack did not get under way until a three-run rally in the sixth.

Hal Trosky touched off the spree with a single and scored on Ken Keltner's double. Mack walked and Rollie Hemsley doubled Keltner home. Feller's fly allowed Mack to trot in from third.

Weatherly's triple and Boudreau's single added a run in the seventh and the Redskins wound up their scoring in the eighth with two runs on Chapman's double and singles by Weatherly and Hemsley.

Chisox Score Nine in Eighth To Beat Tigers

Detroit Bows, 13-4, In Series Opener; Rigney Allows 5 Hits

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 16.—The Chicago White Sox, scoring nine runs in the eighth inning and belting three pitchers for 14 hits, beat the Detroit Tigers, 13 to 4, in the opener of a three-game series today.

John Duncan Rigney held Detroit to five hits and one unearned run in the first eight innings. In the ninth the Tigers added three runs with doubles by Barney McCosky and Dutch Meyer and Rudy York's homer. McCosky got four safeties in four times at bat.

Tommy Bridges, who was charged with the defeat, received ragged support from his teammates and was relieved in the eighth by Harold Newhouser. Clay Smith pitched the ninth.

Snead Sets 2d Record In Open Golf

66 Breaks Own Course Mark in Canadian; D. C. Players Survive

By the United Press

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 16.—Shattering the Scarboro course record for the second straight day, Bridegroom Sammy Snead tonight held a commanding five-stroke lead in the Canadian Open Golf Championship at the end of qualifying play.

The long driver from Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., turned in a 66 for today's 18 holes, five under par. This bettered the course record of 67 he set yesterday and gave him a 36-hole total of 133.

Slammin' Sam's nearest rival among the 129 starters was Ray Mangrum, of Oakmont, Pa., who had a total of 138 after twin rounds of 69 for second place.

Should Win Easily

Unless Snead blows sky-high during tomorrow's final 36 holes, his lead should allow him to breeze to the Canadian Title he won in 1938 and to the $1,000 top money that goes with it. Only the low 60 and ties will compete tomorrow.

A gallery of more than 3,000 persons—including Snead's bride of five days, Audrey—followed him and Stanley Horne, diminutive Montreal pro, over the tricky 6,685-yard layout. Snead shot a brilliant 32 on the outgoing nine, four under par, and he came home in 34, one under par. Horne went out in 34, but blew up coming back, registering a 38 for a 72 and a 36-hole total of 140.

McSpaden Third

This 140 put Horne in fourth place, just behind the defending champion, Harold (Jug) McSpaden, of Winchestern, Mass., who turned in a 70 for 139.

Tied for fifth position were Dick Metz, Chicago; Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., and Sam Kerr, of Toronto, with 141's. Sam Kerr's brother, Bill, had 142, while in the 143 bracket were Ky Laffoon, of Chicago and Vic Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J. Ralph Guldahl, of Chicago had 144, and two amateurs—Ted Bishop, of Boston and Phil Farley, of Toronto—were in the 145 bracket.

With 150 or better for the first 36 holes necessary to qualify for the last half of the tournament today, all three of the entries from Washington, D. C. safely made the grade.

Buck Worsham, Chevy Chase assistant who led the D. C. contingent the first day, added a 78 to his first-round 74 for 152. That was the identical total of Al Houghton, Beaver Dam pro, who came down to 75 after a first-round 77. Bob Barnett, Worsham's boss at Chevy Chase, sliced five strokes off Thursday's score for a 75 and total of 153.

Except for two very bad holes, young Worsham might have been close on the heels of the leaders. He needed seven swings on the par-four eighth, and on the par-three fourteenth he soared to six.

Your Chance, Bimelech Meet In Travers

Three Famous Stakes On Saratoga Track Card Today

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 16.—A trio of historic old stakes—Bimelech makes his latest run for the 3-year-old crown in one of them—will bring Saratoga's racing season to its midsummer peak tomorrow.

Down for decision on the eight-race program which in all probability will attract upward of 20,000 are the seventy-first running of the Travers, oldest stake race in America, the forty-ninth running of the Spinaway and the North American Steplechase Handicap.

Bimmie, star of Col. E. R. Bradley's string, is going after the estimated $20,000 Travers Purse. He must share top billing, however, with a pair of unbeaten 2-year-old fillies, Level Best and Nasca, which clash in the Spinaway.

Top-weighted at 128 and with Don Meade in the saddle instead of the usual F. A. Smith, Bimelech is the logical Travers choice despite early-season defeats in the Kentucky Derby and other rich stakes. The race, moreover, has drawn eight other crack 3-year-olds.

The Bradley racer's most important competition should come from Mrs. George D. Widener's Your Chance, with 122 pounds, and the capable Harry Richards aboard. The Wheatley Stable-Belair Stud's trio of Fenelon, Snow Ridge and Asp; the Manhasset Stable's Call to Colors, and John Hay Whitney's Gramps also are well liked. Fenelon carries 122 pounds, the rest 112.

Crispin Oglebay's unbeaten Level Best, winner here over some good juvenile colts, is a slight favorite to upset undefeated Nasca in the $10,000 Spinaway at 6 furlongs.

Bees Trim Brooklyn, 2-1, in 12-Inning Game

33,590 Turn Out for Night Battle; Hassett's Single Scores Miller With Game-Winning Run

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 16 (AP).—Buddy Hassett's twelfth-inning single scoring Eddie Miller gave the Boston Bees a 2-1 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers tonight before 33,590 fans who jammed Ebbets Field for Freddie Fitzsimmons' "night."

The defeat dropped the Dodgers to six and a half games behind the league-leading Cincinnati Reds who defeated Chicago twice today.

The portly Freddie, who was honored with gifts that included an automobile, a shotgun, and two pipes, after 16 years in the majors, couldn't spur his mates through tonight's game—the fourteenth victory for the Bees in their last 19 outings.

Nick Strincevich, limiting the Brooks to five hits, gained his third victory of the season. The Brooks got their lone tally off him in the fourth when Ducky Medwick singled, went to second on an error and came home on Johnny Hudson's single to center.

That tied the score at 1-all, for Chet Ross in the first half of the same frame had blasted one of Vito Tamulis' Sunday pitches into the deep leftfield stands for his twelfth homer of the season. Neither team even threatened until the twelfth, when the visitors got their fifth and sixth hits of the night.

American Legion Games Postponed Because of Rain

By the Associated Press

Wilson, N. C., Aug. 16.—Rain and wet grounds again caused postponement today of the start of the American Legion Junior Regional Tournament here.

The Washington-Baltimore game was rescheduled for tomorrow afternoon at 3 p. m., and the Norfolk-Albemarle (N. C.) game set for tomorrow night at 8 p. m.

The winners of the two contests will meet Monday afternoon for the championship of the four areas represented.

Giants Down Phils Behind Schumacher

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 16.—The Giants came from behind tonight, with three runs in the seventh and eighth innings, to whip the Phillies, 5 to 3, in the final night game of the season at the Polo Grounds. Hal Schumacher pitched an eight-hitter for the Giants, and Ham Schulte hit a homer for the Phils.

The victory gave the Giants a record of five wins and two setbacks in their arc-light starts in their home park this season. They played to a total of 169,028 customers in those seven games, including a cozy gathering of 7,362 tonight.

Schumacher, chalking up his tenth victory of the season, bested Hugh Mulcahy. It didn't look like he would, however, in the first inning, when Ham Schulte's homer gave the Phils two of their three runs.

Good Friday Jumps 6 Feet At Berryville

Md.-Owned Gelding Wins Two Events, Ties For Title Division

By Anne Hagner

Berryville, Va., Aug. 16.—It turned out to be almost a 100 per cent good Friday for A. R. Heinrich's Good Friday at the Clarke County Horse Show here today, as the Maryland-owned gelding jumped 6 feet to win the high jumping contest, took the open jumping event at 5 feet, and tied for the championship of his division.

The only calamity of the day for Good Friday came when Newton Mayo, rider of Peggy Sampson's Black Boy, discovered that his mount and Heinrich's big bay were tied in points gained for the award, thus necessitating a coin flip to make the final decision. Eddie Talbert, Good Friday's rider, lost the flip and took the reserve championship.

Loss of the tricolor meant little to the Maryland pair, however, after they had jumped nearly 20 fences in quest of the high jumping title. Good Friday and Black Boy jumped off so many times that the show program was delayed more than an hour and a half as the duel continued over 5½ and 6 foot fences.

When young Talbert and the quiet-mannered half-bred finally went clean over the 6-foot bar, the crowd, exhausted from watching seven jump-offs in deep mud, went wild to the extent of forgetting its dampness from the intermittent showers that haunted the two-day meeting.

Royalty II Not A Winner

Talbert, only Washingtonian entered in the show, received most of the attention during the late hours of the afternoon, but hunt country folk were still able to get plenty of enjoyment from the hunter championship race.

Mrs. George Watts Hill's Balonian, who played second fiddle to his stablemate, Inky, all during yesterday's opening session, came into his own with a flourish today to win three blue ribbons, making a total score of 17½ points to Inky's 15.

J. Edward Barker's Spy, two-time winner yesterday, could do no better than third today and was far below the title winner, with 8 points. Mr. and Mrs. Haggin Perry's Village Miss was fourth in the list with 7 points.

Greatest surprise to show followers was the absence of Robert S. Waters' Royalty II from the winner's circle this year. For the past two years, the big bay gelding has made Berryville's show a veritable field day, but this trip found him with only one ribbon, a second place won in the Corinthian hunters' class with Charles Lewis up.

WASHINGTON: AUG. 17, 1940

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Boston, Aug. 16.—The Red Sox will win no pennant, but they qualify for at least one superlative. They are, in a sense, the most pathetic team in the big leagues. They are the poor little rich club of baseball. Their money might just as well be counterfeit for all the happiness it is bringing 'em. Tom Yawkey has run smack dab into the old baseball adage that you can't buy a pennant.

POVICH

All this Boston team needed this year was some half-decent pitching to win the pennant. Even with Washington's pitching staff, the Red Sox could have breezed in. Toss out pitching, and the Red Sox are the best club in the league—the best balanced, we mean. They can hit like sin, their outfield has no peers defensively, and they have Jimmy Foxx. But the Red Sox pitching this year has been of the sort to curdle mother love.

Yawkey tried to buy pitching for his Red Sox. Joe Cronin knew the staff he owned at the end of the 1939 season wasn't going to take him far in 1940. Yawkey brandished his check book and came up with two of the bright pitching stars of the high minors—Herb Hash and Jim Butland, of Minneapolis. They appeared to be the best available outside of the big leagues. They cost Yawkey 30 grand apiece.

They both flopped. Butland was shipped back to the minors early in the season. He simply wasn't a big leaguer. Hash is still hanging on, but he isn't provoking any rhapsodies except among the guys who hit against him.

We wonder what Yawkey's emotions are when he views the luck of other big league club owners. Clark Griffith, for example, who fetched young Sidney Hudson out of a Class D league for a song and is seeing him make good emphatically in his first year in the majors; or Alva Bradley, who signed Al Smith, the National League cast-off, from the Buffalo club and watched him pitch winning baseball for the Indians.

Yawkey by this time is doubtless conceding that pitchers can't be bought. That luck is as much a factor as dollars, perhaps more. He has an example on his own team. The best young pitcher to come up with the Red Sox in several years is no fancy-priced minor leaguer, but Rookie Earl Johnson, the left-hander Boston signed fresh out of St. Mary's College in California.

The Boston pitching situation is too bad, as we were saying. This is the year when the Red Sox could have won the pennant, with even tolerable pitching. They had everything else. And they had also in their favor the heaven sent collapse of the Yankees, the only club they seemingly had to beat.

Clark Griffith might have forewarned Yawkey of his 1940 fate. The old gentleman in Washington has orated for years that the toughest task for a club owner is to build up a pitching staff. Griffith has traded infielders, outfielders and catchers, but he has never traded a star pitcher unless you except Buck Newsom who wouldn't keep in shape for him. Grif knows that pitchers can't be bought. They just sort of have to be raised.

At a time when Lefty Grove would have been a help to the Red Sox, he's simply too old. As far as the Red Sox are concerned, Grove was ahead of his time. One of his 25-victory years might have carried the Red Sox to the top, but Grove is now a once-a-week pitcher and none too capable even with six days' rest. At 40, he is at best a stop-gap.

No ball club has been able to buy a pennant since the early twenties when the Yankees raided the Boston club of Harry Frazee, who owed a mortgage department to Col. Ruppert. The Detroit Tigers won a pennant in 1934 after acquiring Mickey Cochrane from Connie Mack for $100,000, but that was very surprising even to the Tiger ownership. They hadn't expected to win the pennant. They merely bought Cochrane as the first step toward building a pennant winner within two or three years.

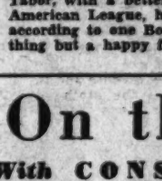
The Red Sox this season have scored enough runs to win a pennant in any normal year, and defensively the club is brilliant. The entire onus has been on Cronin's pitching. Five, six and seven run leads held by the Red Sox have meant little to the opposition. Boston's pitchers could be depended on to blow 'em. There were weeks at a stretch when Cronin didn't see a starting pitcher finish a game, and there were too many days when he didn't know where his next pitcher was coming from.

This Red Sox team has been beset, too, it develops, by internal troubles that haven't contributed to Cronin's happiness. The Ted Williams case has been widely publicized, but it seems now that there has been another defection in the ranks. Third Baseman Jim Tabor, with a better average in the night club circuit than in the American League, has been grumbling and second-guessing Cronin, according to one Boston newspaper. The Red Sox seem to be anything but a happy family.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 16.—We seem to be spending an absurd proportion of our life trying to understand the lawn tennis people. They are what you might call inconsistently inconsistent. Their constitution is written on a slide rule. As long as he is on top, a tennis amateur can do about what he pleases. But let him fail to such an extent that he has trouble mooching on the clubs (and therefore reluctantly becomes an amateur in fact as well as name) and the United States Lawn Tennis people will slap him down with some kind of ruling such as was plastered on Gene Mako and Wayne Sabin. Neither was molested when the height of their games was equalled only by the height of their rule-rupturing.



CONSIDINE

Latest inconsistency concerns this new kid, Frank Kovacs. Like his contemporaries Kovacs is working all the minor little dodges. He, like most of the other headliners, long since has broken the eight-week rule—a code the U. S. L. T. A. apparently keeps on its books only to enforce righteously now and then against bums who no longer have any box office appeal.

Kovacs demanded a suite of rooms at the swank Westchester Biltmore before he would agree to play in the Rye championships last week. The people who were running the tournament have become accustomed to sand-bagging of this nature, through years of association with tennis amateurs, and readily agreed. But the U. S. L. T. A. heard about it and put its foot down, though why it should permit Kovacs to kick around most of its other rules, as the other boys and girls do, and call him on this one whimsy, is hard to understand.

The Rye tournament committee, as usual, probably paid round-trip transportation monies from California to New York to the better Californians entered even though they were in the East at the time. This is an old practice in amateur tennis. In the good days a crack Californian could play up and down the Atlantic seaboard, making jumps of sometimes about 20 miles from one tournament to another, and get a couple hundred bucks transportation expenses "from California" at each tournament stop. Mako was in good standing at a time when he was not only doing this but also cleaning up in foreign exhibition matches, while being supported by Davis Cup funds. But as soon as he began to slip and thus had many fewer chances to turn a furtive buck, and thus finally became an amateur, he was indignantly barred on some such charge comparable to the arrest of an absconding bank teller for parking double.

Holcombe Ward, president of the U. S. L. T. A., said recently that one of the reasons he would never countenance an open tennis tournament was that he was afraid one of those odious pros would reach the final round and then refuse to take the court for the championship match unless he was given some extra bonus. We doubt if he is as horrified at the thought as he sounded, for he has been associated for many years with amateurs who have been doing much the same sort of thing. His No. 1 amateur drawing card held up the promoters of a Florida amateur tournament this past season but will not be molested, because he is his No. 1 amateur drawing card.

We think it might be healthier if tennis followed the lead of polo and disbanded all boundary lines between amateur and pro. In polo the players are just players. Some play for dough; some play for exercises, and nobody seems to care so much what the player is as how good he is. In tennis the appointed guardians of the amateur ideal often are the sabateurs of it. Officials who are entrusted by their home clubs with the job of running a tournament that will get a lot of publicity, kick such U. S. L. T. A. rules in the teeth as stand in the way of getting the expensive amateurs who'll generate the publicity. Kovacs' yell for a suite was probably the least of his demands. We think he should teach the tennis fathers a lesson by demanding a full floor at the Forest Hills Inn, headquarters for the players in the National Singles late this month. The U. S. L. T. A. won't be able to turn that one down, for Kovacs, with his hard-hitting and court eccentricities, will mean thousands of dollars at the box office, for Riggs and McNeill (his only peers) are old stuff and there will be no foreign players to bolster the gate. There was some hope that Baron Gottfried von Cramm would play in our Nationals, when it was reported that he was in this country incognito, but it is now known that he is in Berlin, attached to a home-defense antiaircraft squadron.

Jimmy Foxx's Homer in Tenth Defeats Nats for Boston, 7-6

Slugging Star Collects Two Circuit Blows

Krakauskas Charged With Defeat; Jimmy Bloodworth Bangs Out Homer in Ninth

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Boston, Aug. 16.—The Nats ran out of home runs late this afternoon but Jimmy Foxx was saving one for the Red Sox—a tenth inning clout that delivered the ball game to Boston, 7 to 6. It was Foxx's second homer of the day, and the fifth of the afternoon.

Joe Krakauskas was the losing pitcher in the battle of homers. The victory-starved Krakauskas, within three outs of scoring his first triumph of the season when he permitted the Red Sox to tie the score at 6-6 in the ninth and set the stage for Foxx's historic homer.

It was historic. It was Foxx's 495th homer of his big league career, moving him one clout ahead of Lou Gehrig for the honor of being runner-up to Babe Ruth in the production of big league home runs. The crown is not uneasy on Ruth's head, however. Foxx is still 219 shy of the Babe's 714 homers.

The Nats hit two of the day's homers and the real victim of the Red Sox's triumph was Jimmy Bloodworth, who banged out a story-book home run in the ninth off Emerson Dickman. With the Nats trailing by a run, Gee Walker on base, and two out in the ninth, Bloodworth swatted the ball over the left field wall to wipe out Boston's 5-4 lead and set the Nats up in front, 6-5.

Foxx Hits One Into Right

After yielding the tying run to Boston in the ninth, Krakky went back to the mound in the tenth and threw three straight balls to Foxx, the first man to face him. His next pitch was wide also, but Foxx reached out and literally bumped it obliquely into the rightfield stands. It wasn't much of a homer as homers go, merely a glorified pop fly that fell just inside the foul pole 304 feet from the plate, but it broke up the ball game very completely.

A gathering of 14,300 fans—half of them ladies' day and boys' day guests—saw the Red Sox cuff Rene Monteagudo around for a 5-to-1 lead in the first three innings. The Nats dug themselves out from under that deficit gallantly, thanks chiefly to Gee Walker's 2-run homer in the seventh, and, of course, Bloodworth's 2-run blast in the ninth. Walker's homer drove Freddy Ostermueller out of the box.

Foxx contributed his first homer of the day in the first inning after Roger Cramer had singled. It was an enormous drive that cleared the leftfield screen.

Monteagudo gave up another run in the second, after Finney and Doerr greeted the Cuban with singles. DiMaggio's single to left moved Finney home. Cronin was on base by a walk when Bobby Doerr banged a homer over the leftfield wall for 2 Boston runs in the third.

Travis Drives In Run

The Nats meanwhile could stir up only 1 run against Ostermueller. They got it in the third when Case walked, went to second on Lewis' out and galloped home on the first of three singles to center by Cecil Travis.

Alex Carrasquel held the Red Sox in check for two innings and, in the sixth, the Nats cut Boston's lead to 5 to 2. Travis led off with a single and scored on a single by Myer and Rick Ferrell's double against the leftfield wall.

Buddy Lewis' single to left preceded Walker's drive over the leftfield wall and the Nats thus cut Boston's lead to 5-4 in the seventh.

The Red Sox outfielders came to Dickman's aid in the ninth, but the Nats tied the score nevertheless. Dom DiMaggio robbed Lewis of Cincinnati, Aug. 16.—Undefeated Washington took a 7-to-5 victory from New York today to move into the final round of the International Printers Baseball Tournament against the Boston typos who eliminated Detroit, 8 to 4.

The Printer-Senators grabbed their decision with a four-run seventh-inning attack on a series of singles, two stolen bases, Leftfielder Holbrook's triple and a wild throw to the plate.

Baumker held the favored Detroit team hitless for five rounds. The Motor City club started its scoring with one run in the seventh and tallied three more in the ninth, but got to Baumker too late to overcome an early lead.

Reds Capture Pair From Cubs, 9-4, 6-3

34,000 Ladies Day Crowd See Double-Header; Bill Lee Loses Fourteenth Game of Season In Nightcap; 7th Inning Run Breaks Tie

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 16.—The high-flying Cincinnati Reds snapped out of their long hitting slump today, banging out 26 hits off four pitchers for a double victory over the Chicago Cubs, 9 to 4 and 6 to 3, before 34,000 spectators.

The Reds, whose first place margin had slipped from nine to five games in recent weeks, collected 13 hits in each game as they handed the Cubs their seventh loss in their last nine games. Cincinnati tagged Big Bill Lee with his fourteenth mound defeat of the season in the second game, relief pitcher Johnny Hutchings getting credit for his first big league victory. Junior Thompson started the nightcap but yielded five hits and three runs in 3 1-3 innings. Hutchings held the Cubs scoreless the remainder of the way and never was in serious trouble.

The Reds pushed across the winning run of the second game in the seventh on Bill Werber's single, a sacrifice and Linus Frey's single. The Reds added two more in the ninth on two hits sandwiched around a sacrifice and an outfield fly.

Whitey Moore was ahead of the Cubs all the way in the first game, shutting them out until the eighth inning when Hank Leiber connected for a two-run homer, his fourteenth of the season. The Cubs added two more in the ninth, but Moore easily retired the side before the threat became serious.

The Reds scored in the opening inning after Verne Olsen, Cub southpaw, had struck out the first two batters. Frey singled, Frank McCormick walked and Ernie Lombardi sent Frey home with a single. The Reds added two more in the third when Morrie Arnovich doubled after Frank McCormick and

Los Angeles Duo Defeats Kovacs, Amark

By the Associated Press

Newport, R. I., Aug. 16.—Charles Matman and Robert Harman, of Los Angeles, gained the semifinal doubles round of the Newport Casino tennis tournament today by defeating Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, and Edwin Amark, of San Francisco, 3—6, 2—6, 6—4, 9—7, 6—4.

Kovacs clowned a bit and at one point walked off the court during play.

The losers were in command through the first two sets and appeared on the way to an easy verdict. But Matman and Harman rallied to take the third set and then proved superior in a gruelling 16-game fourth set. Back on even terms they went to work and captured the deciding set without much trouble.

Earlier in the day Kovacs gained the final singles round by eliminating Midshipman Joe Hunt, of Annapolis, 6—4, 5—7, 6—4, 6—2. Don McNeill, national clay court champion from Oklahoma City, won the other berth by disposing of Frederick Schroeder, jr., of Glendale, Calif., 6—3, 6—4, 6—2.

Frank Parker, of Oakland, and McNeill won the other berth in the doubles final by overpowering Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, and Russell Bobbitt, of Atlanta, 6—4, 6—4, 6—4. They will face Matman and Harman in the final match tomorrow afternoon.

World Champ Defeats Miss Palfrey; 21-Yr.-Old Star Beats Hardwick

By the Associated Press

Manchester, Mass., Aug. 16.—Pauline Betz, 21, of Beverly Hills, Calif., the girl with the three-set hex on World Champion Alice Marble, today won the privilege of meeting her main tennis objective a fourth time here tomorrow in the Essex County Club tournament finals.

The pair breezed through semifinal opponents, Miss Marble first whipping her doubles partner, Sarah Palfrey, of Reno, Nev., 6—1, 6—3, and the unseeded Miss Betz followed by beating Mary Hardwick, of England, 6—1, 6—1.

Later in the day Miss Betz, paired with Margaret Osborne, of Los Angeles, threw a scare into the world champion doubles tandem of Miss Marble and Miss Palfrey, undefeated in four full years, as they won the first set in their semifinal battle, 6—3, only to lose the next two and the match, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4.

In the other doubles semifinal the British Wightman Cup team of Mary Hardwick and Valerie Scott eliminated Dorothy Bundy, Los Angeles, and Mrs. Johnny Van Ryn, Austin, Tex., 6—3, 6—4.

Miss Betz, winner of 8 of her last 16 tournaments and hailed as the sport's newest sensation, has met Miss Marble three times and holds the distinction of having won more sets from the world queen than any other player since Miss Marble began her current undefeated streak in 1938. Each time Miss Betz won the first set, 6—3, only to lose the next two and the match.

"This time," says the girl regarded as Miss Marble's successor, "I hope to put together two sets in the same match."

St. Louis Junior Legion Nine Defeats Knoxville

Johnson City, Tenn., Aug. 16 (AP).—The St. Louis (Mo.) Junior American Legion baseball team advanced to the finals of the regional tournament here today with a 2-1 victory over the Knoxville, Tenn., nine.

Behind the five-hit pitching of Kline, the Missourians pushed over runs in the fourth and fifth innings. Knoxville's lone tally came in the seventh.

St. Louis will meet the winner of the East Chicago (Ind.)-Louisville (Ky.) game this afternoon in the finals tomorrow.

Cards Rally To Earn Split With Bucs

St. Louis Loses First Game, 6-5, Wins Last By 9-5 in Hot Battle

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 16.—The up-and-coming Pittsburgh Pirates and the also up-and-coming St. Louis Cardinals divided a double-header today—the Bucs taking the first game, 6 to 5, and the Redbirds the second, 9 to 5—but the Cardinals' performance was good enough to take over fifth place from the Chicago Cubs, who lost a double-header to Cincinnati.

While each team collected 11 hits in the second game, inability of four Pittsburgh hurlers to locate the plate brought about the Pirates' downfall. The Cards drew nine passes and seven figured directly in the scoring.

Two important triples by Enos Slaughter, another by Joe Orengo and a double by Johnny Mize paced the Cards' second-game attack. Deb Garms led the Pirates with a four-baser and two singles, while Paul Waner collected a brace of doubles and a single.

The Cards were four runs behind until the eighth inning of the opener. Then they routed both Dick Lanahan and Ken Heintzelman and buffeted Johnny Lanning to tie the score. The Pirates, however, won the game in the next inning on Bob Elliott's double off Bill McGee and Elbie Fletcher's single off Clyde Shoun.

Angler Lands 795-Lb. Tuna, New Atlantic Mark

Newburyport, Mass., Aug. 16 (AP).—Landing a 795-pound tuna after a 4½-hour struggle off Plum Island, Frederick S. Gibbs, of Waban, surpassed yesterday the American Atlantic sport-fishing record established July 25 by Ben Crowninshield, of Annisquam and Boston, who pulled in a 753-pounder in Ipswich Bay.

Champion U. S. Archer to Give Exhibition in District Today

Shown as he prepares to send an arrow sailing is Pat Chambers, archery champion of the United States. He'll give a free exhibition of his art today on the Washington Monument slope at 3 p. m.

Pat Chambers Will Appear Here in Exhibit on West Slope of Monument

Washington's archery addicts will get an idea of how the sport really should be undergone today, when Pat Chambers, U. S. champion, stages an exhibition on the west slope of the Washington Monument at 3 p. m.

The event, sponsored by the Potomac Archers Association, will include demonstrations of target, hunting and trick shooting. Permanent targets have been built and there will be sufficient room for as many spectators as wish to attend.

Chambers' exhibitions marks one of the first times a major titlist has appeared in the District. Winner of the National Archery Association's tournament last season, his appearance here is expected to boost interest in the activity immensely.

Ballston Lists Double-Header Softball Games

First firing in the 1940 race for the softball championship of Washington will be heard this afternoon at Ballston Stadium where Cameo A. C. and State Department come to grips at 2 p. m.

The second game of the twin bill will bring together Senate Beer, defending champion, and the Monocasting ten at approximately 3:15.

In the tourney due to a District Softball Association ruling that the winner of the previous year is not forced to qualify, Senate will probably have little trouble with today's foe, which won the title in the Government Printing Office League. The last three titles have been taken by the Beermen, and this year's club appears almost as strong as its predecessors. Senate is one of two seeded teams in action, the other being I. B. M.

Cameo's appearance in the tourney resulted from its winning of the Dixie League race. It will probably be extended the limit to trip State Department, which holds the Metro B League title.

Reach Singles Finals

Erie, Pa., Aug. 16 (AP).—Gordon Robinson, of Stamford, Conn., and Bill Maul, of Detroit, advanced to the finals of the Great Lakes tennis tournament today, Maul upsetting Harry Zink, of Steubenville, Ohio, 6—4, 4—6, 8—6, 6—4, and Robinson turning back Dick Shipp, Harrisburg, 6—3, 6—3, 6—4.

Cardinals Win

Charles E. Ford's Cardinal A. C. defeated the Anacostia Cardinals, 7-1, at Eastern High School Stadium. Harvey Gatton, All-High outfielder, made his mound debut by giving up one hit while fanning 13. Battery Mate Speiser connected for the circuit with the bases filled.

District Team Will Definitely Play in Tourney

Washington's sandlot ball players were relieved of suspense caused by false reports last night when Wash B. Williams, president of the local chapter of the National Amateur Baseball Federation, announced that the winner of the District week-day championship tournament definitely will be given a trip to the national tourney in Birmingham, Ala.

Williams' statement followed a meeting Thursday night, at which board members vouched money from their own pockets to pay expenses in case the D. C. chapter found itself lacking funds.

Assurance, however, that the latter would be unnecessary was given when the welfare and recreation center announced it would erect stands on the Ellipse and charge admission to the local championships. These will start next Thursday, with winners of The Washington Post Industrial League, Militia League, and the United States Government League in competition. Approximately 500 seats will be provided, with the cost of each to be 25 cents.

A deficit in the federation coffers caused during last year's national event, which was staged here, as well as a falling off in interest was earlier expected to ruin prospects of a local representative in Birmingham on September 5. Yet President Williams last night said interest was never higher, witness the willingness of board members to defray expenses themselves.

Meanwhile, the second consecutive postponement of the Cameo-Heurich playoff game in the second half of The Post-Industrial League occurred yesterday because of rain. Action will be resumed Monday on the Ellipse at 4:30 p. m.

A Cameo victory will give the Furniture club the second-half title and send the teams into a three-game playoff for the league crown. If Heurich, the defending champion, wins Monday, a third game in the second-half playoff will be necessary. Heurich is the first-half titlist.

St. Elizabeths nine is the only team at present certain of a District tournament berth.

Mary Ryan Surpasses National Swim Record

Portland, Oreg., Aug. 16 (AP).—Mary Ryan, of the Lakeside Club, Louisville, surpassed the national record today in successfully defending her 1939 title in the 1-mile freestyle event at the women's senior A. A. U. swimming and diving championships.

Her time was 23:15. The record of 23:47.4 was set at Santa Barbara two years ago by Katherine Rawls Thompson.

Lyn Lary Given Release By St. Louis Browns

St. Louis, Aug. 16 (AP).—Lyn Lary was given his unconditional release by the Browns today, apparently ending a major league career which began in 1929 when the New York Yankees purchased him from Oakland, of the Pacific Coast League.

Lary subsequently played with the Boston Red Sox, Washington, the Browns, Cleveland, Brooklyn, the St. Louis Cardinals and then came back to the Browns this season when the Cards released him.

He has been used only occasionally by the Browns.

Ray Hare, Rookie Back, Wrecks Ray Flaherty's Grid Stalwarts

By Al Hailey
A Staff Correspondent

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 16.—Memo to all National Professional Football League clubs:

You haven't a thing to worry about, fellows the Washington Redskins will be such a battered and torn gang of citizens by the time they return East they won't be able to get up off the bench, if the present trend continues.

The trend is a character named Ray Hare, rookie halfback obtained from Spokane's Gonzaga University.

In two scrimmages Ray has been instrumental in making four old-time Redskins bite the dust—four stalwarts who had on heavily padded blocking aprons worn by the defense.

Tomorrow the lads are going to discard their aprons and scrimmage for the first time in full uniform with both teams going on offense and defense, and anything can happen.

"I'm going to have to do something about this guy—he runs too hard," Coach Ray Flaherty lamented, debating whether to be glad or sad. "Maybe I can slip some iron weights around his shoes."

Here's Hare's record to date.

Tuesday—Put block on End Charley Malone, knocking Charley out for three minutes and putting him on inactive list since.

Wednesday—Gave defensive terrific wind burn, running by them in light signal drill.

Thursday—Put block on End Ernie Pinckert, dislodging Pinckert from headgear, with result that Pinckert received gashed lip. Put block on Bo Russell (shoulder to midsection), with result that Bo dozed for some four minutes.

Took part in delivering bleeding noses to Bill Young and Wayne Millner. Net result—Two stitches in Pinckert's lip, light work only for Russell.

Friday—Discovered his weight was down to a scant 203, made resolution to make it even 200 in tomorrow's workout.

So there you are, fellows—while you're having your spinach and liverwurst, Hare will be spotting his next victim.

Pandoramint Leads Throughout to Take Cumberland Race

8,000 View Filly's Victory Run in Mud

Winner, Favorite, Pays $5 Mutuel; 'Good Neighbors Day' Held at Track

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 16.—Pandoramint, owned by E. H. Titmus, jr., took the lead with the first tingle of the starting bell and stayed on top throughout the running of the Knights of Columbus Purse, feature event of the Friday program. Operating in the interests of the favorite players in a crowd of 8,000, the 5-year-old daughter of Brandon Mint jogged to the finish line four lengths in advance of her closest rival in a field of eight going 6½ furlongs.

The track was deep and holding as the result of rain last night and this morning. Pandoramint's preference for the muddy going was well known and those who backed her chances were satisfied with a $5 mutuel.

The day was designated as "Good Neighbors Day" at the races and fair and speakers included Congressman Jennings Randolph, chairman of the District Committee, and Harry A. Nice, former Governor of Maryland and now a candidate for the Senate.

Jockey R. Haber rode a well-judged race on Pandoramint despite the fact that she won with ease. He took her to the front, made her shake off Mrs. H. Horst's Way Out, drew out nicely, and then steadied her through the stretch. There was a lot of knocking and blocking behind her, but she was tossing mud at her rivals.

The day's steeplechase provided plenty of thrills. John Bosley's Leicestershire proved the winner at an $8.10 mutuel in a driving finish that saw Mrs. G. W. Rutt's Flying Clown second and L. T. Davis' Maespur third. Three horses fell in the running, Playdown, Bay Arnold and Thorny Rose all went down in spectacular fashion. Thorny Rose was knocked out and laid in the infield for more than two hours before staggering to her feet to the applause of the crowd.

Jockey Willie Obert, America's oldest active jockey, rode a fine race in the opening event to get J. S. Kelly's Strolling In home in the first race, the filly coming from behind to down Gradatim and Nitanot.

Strolling In's victory paved the way for a $175.60 payoff in the daily double. The winning filly paid $7.40 in her own right and was teamed as the "2 and 3" combination with Black Brigade, $39.50 winner in the second race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK BRIGADE, $39.50, $11.40, $5.90; FREDERICK, $5.50, $4.30; BLIND TALK, $4.20.
BLACK BRIGADE, at home in going, held forward position from start, came wide for racing room when placed to drive and wore down FREDERICK in concluding strides. FREDERICK, rated while closest in pursuit of NO FAIR'S pace, took command when placed to drive, but could not resist winner. NO FAIR was rushed while setting pace and weakened when real test came. BLIND TALK, bothered after opening furlong, saved ground and closed gamely.

Daily Doubles, STROLLING IN and BLACK BRIGADE, Paid $175.60

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $500; claiming. The Queen City Neon Signs Co. Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Maidens. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:15. Off 34 once. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ELAMP, $18.80, $8.50, $4.90; QUESTIRE, $18.70, $9.60; LADY SOLACE, $3.70.
ELAMP lacked early speed, stumbled while improving position, recovered quickly, was forced very wide at stretch turn and was up in concluding stride while under vigorous handling. QUESTIRE went to front at once, drew clear and tired suddenly inside sixteenth pole. LADY SOLACE saved ground, responded when shaken up and just missed while closing gamely. ACE OF TRUMPS was hard used trying to dispose of QUESTIRE and was weakening at end.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. The Wilson Hardware Co. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:52. Off at once. Winner, Mrs. C. P. Miles' b. g. (5), by Jamestown—Justa Pal. Trained by C. P. Miles. Value to winner, $300; second, $65; third, $25; fourth, $10. Time, 1:54⅘.

†William McFarland-C. D. Jeffries entry.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—STROLLING IN, $7.40, $4.10, $3.80; ORADATIM, $7.60, $4.90; NITANOT, $4.90.
STROLLING IN, steadied when outrun early, came to outside for racing room after 3 furlongs, came around leaders and was kept to drive to end. ORADATIM saved ground while in first flight, was slightly bothered when unable to get through on rail entering stretch and closed boldly when clear. NITANOT, first away, drew out while setting pace, but weakened in final three-sixteenths.

SECONDE ACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. The Bill Kern. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:40. Off 2:42. Winner, Robert S. Porter's blk. g. (7), by Broadway Jones—Shirley Louise. Trained by W. B. Haller. Value to winner, $300; second, $65; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:26⅘.

Wheat Breaks, Dragging All Commodities

Major Grain Slumps 2⅞ to 3⅝ Cents On War Nervousness

By the Associated Press

A crash in Chicago wheat echoed in other major futures markets yesterday while the air battle over England reached new fury.

Wheat broke as much as 5 cents a bushel to the lowest levels since August last year. Final quotations were off 2¼ to 3⅝ cents a bushel. Corn lost ⅛ to ⅝ of a cent.

Declines in other staples were more moderate but "wait-and-see" was the attitude of most buyers.

Cotton at New York lost 25 to 40 cents a bale, hides about ½ cent a pound, zinc as much as 1-5 cent and wool tops 1.4 cents.

Also trimmed were coffee, world sugar and cocoa. Rubber, domestic sugar and cottonseed oil were irregular while copper and silk crossed to the plus side.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot commodities, based on 1926 as 100, skidded to a new low for the year at 69.03. This compared with 69.40 Thursday.

Worst Break Since May

Chicago, Aug. 16 (AP).—In the worst break since the market cracked wide open last May, wheat prices today tumbled as much as 5 cents a bushel as the fury of the air attack on England increased.

September wheat fell to 66⅞ at one stage, the lowest quotation posted here since last August 30, two days before the German invasion of Poland was launched. This compared with a peak of $1.11 reached before the collapse of more than 30 cents a bushel in May when the Germans pushed into western Europe.

For three weeks following that break in May the contract as well as other deliveries of wheat and other grains were held around minimum levels at the instigation of Government officials. The minimum for September wheat was 78¼. The Government loan rate for deliverable wheat here is 81 cents.

Corn Also Declines

Corn fell more than a cent at one stage, May reaching a new low for the season of 54⅞, while all oats and rye deliveries were at new seasonal lows, rye tumbling as much as 3 cents.

Despite a moderate rally after the midsession break, wheat closed 2⅞ to 3⅝ lower than yesterday; September, 68½ to 68¾; December, 70¼ to 70½. Corn was ⅛ to ⅝ down; September, 59⅝ to 60¼; December, 54⅝. Oats unchanged to ¼ off. Rye, 2¼ down. Soybeans, ½ to ¾ lower and lard unchanged to 7 higher.

Selling was on a small scale in wheat during the first hour, being confined mostly to hedging, but when increased offerings disclosed a lack of buying support the decline became more rapid, attracting stop-loss selling on a fairly broad scale. Outside markets showed corresponding losses. Chicago September wheat closed more than 5 cents below the pegged minimum price at Winnipeg, where futures quotations have held since late in June.

Traders Clear Decks

There was little new in the trade news to stimulate selling and pit brokers said liquidation apparently came from tired owners and dealers hastening to get out of the market pending a decision in Europe. England, they said, is virtually the only large European importer capable of taking wheat and already has contracted for a year's supply from Canada and Australia.

Thus, outlet for the largest supply ever accumulated in North America is limited as long as the war restricts European importations and distribution of food in German-occupied areas, traders said. Canada and the United States are expected to have a total supply of around 1,800,000,000 bushels, of which less than half would be needed domestically this season.

The fixing of minimum prices for wheat in Canada at levels which traders said were below current quotations attracted attention.

The action of wheat dominated trade in other pits, although corn showed comparative strength due to the tight supply situation reflecting large stocks under loan. Shippers sold 53,000 bushels of corn and 31,000 oats.

Strength of lard reflected hog market gains, the hog top reaching $7.10, highest level since last October.

Backers of N. Y. World's Fair May Lose 75% of Investment

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser

Economic Commentator

It is now apparent that the backers of the New York World's Fair will lose about three-fourths of their investment. But by the same token this inability to recoup costs means that the public, which attends the fair, gets an outstanding bargain.

The captain of this great show of the works of private enterprise and of government is Harvey D. Gibson, chairman of the Manufacturers Trust Co. of New York, and chairman of the fair corporation. I journeyed over to the Administration Building to discuss with Mr. Gibson the financial aspects of the fair, which closes down forever on October 27.

Mr. Rukeyser

"Maybe," said Mr. Gibson, "the war gives unique qualities to this fair. Perhaps we are in a period of great transition in the world, and maybe the state of technology and advancement of the arts as of 1939-40 will take on unusual historic significance. Certainly, with Americans barred this year from Europe by war restraints, the capacity to visit the foreign buildings constitutes the only way open to come in contact with alien cultures.

"Never again—certainly not within our lifetimes—will there be another world's fair of this type. Some of the nations exhibiting have already disappeared. And certainly the spirit of international cooperation which is needed is temporarily missing.

"The world may move along new tangents, and progress may not be along straight lines from the base pictured in the New York World's Fair. Certainly in view of the large losses of the backers, men in other cities will be deterred from undertaking again a fair on this scope."

Although Mr. Gibson explained that first the weather and later the surrender of France had hurt attendance at the fair this year, the financier said that nevertheless it was worthwhile to stage the show for a second season. As a matter of fact, the fair corporation itself has shown an operating profit thus far this season of well over $1,000,000. Mr. Gibson reported that the big industrial exhibitors were satisfied.

Mr. Gibson said that the foreign governments were satisfied, and the fair was one place where it was still possible for some of them to make a showing. Mr. Gibson further announced that there had been a marked pickup in the amusement area, which last season took in but 20 per cent of the gate and which this year is taking in a sum equal to 60 per cent of the gate. Mr. Gibson ascribed this gain to improvement in the quality of entertainment along the gay white way.

Mr. Gibson computed that total expenditures at the fair by the fair corporation and exhibitors approached $155,000,000, including $28,000,000 put up by the bondholders in the fair corporation. The next biggest fair was the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago in 1933-34, and, according to Mr. Gibson, $8,000,000 was spent, of which about $6,500,000 was advanced by private backers.

By astute management, Mr. Gibson said the Chicago fair was able to recoup $6,500,000, and he indicated that out of the $28,000,000 investment the New York fair would probably get back for redistribution to bondholders no more than $6,500,000.

Mr. Gibson indicated that theoretically the fair could have been made to pay either through smaller outlays or bigger attendance.

Mr. Gibson long ago had advised bondholders to carry securities on their books at 25 per cent of face value. There is widespread appreciation of Mr. Gibson's services. When it was apparent that the fair was facing snags, Mr. Gibson stepped into the breach and took over the management responsibility.

In recent days Mr. Gibson has sensed the early signs of a pickup in attendance, reflecting lessening of the shock which came with the capitulation of France. Mr. Gibson believes that with the fair approaching its closing days it will have a new scarcity appeal, which the management will hereafter stress.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—Worth street reported considerable demand for gray goods today at about ⅛ of a cent a yard under the current market price. Actual transactions, however, were light.

Woolen goods trade was highlighted by substantial Government purchases of wool stocks. Silk prices remained firm in anticipation of a seasonal upturn in business. Some of the more popular acetate blends of rayon goods moved briskly.

Sales were reported on the basis of the following quotations for immediate delivery: Print cloths, 38½, 64x60, 3.35, 4¼; broad cloths, 27, 100x80, 4.10, 6¾; sheetings, 37, 48-48, 4.00, 8½; combed lawns, 46, 76x72, 9.00, 6¼.

8% Increase In Store Sales Noted in Week

Richmond District Shows 13% Climb, Reserve Reports

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board estimated yesterday that department store sales in the week ended August 10 were 8 per cent larger than in the corresponding week last year.

In the week ended August 3, sales had been 5 per cent above 1939, and in the four weeks ended August 10 they averaged 7 per cent more than in the similar period a year ago.

By Federal Reserve districts, sales in the week ended August 10 compared with a year ago follow:

Increases—New York, 8; Philadelphia, 11; Cleveland, 12; Richmond, 13; Atlanta, 8; Chicago, 12; St. Louis, 15; Kansas City, 4; Dallas, 9, and San Francisco, 3 per cent.

Decreases—Boston, 4 and Minneapolis, 1 per cent.

Week's Auto Output Estimated at 20,475

Detroit, Aug. 16 (AP).—The seasonal autumn upturn in automobile production began this week, Ward's Reports said today in estimating current output of cars and trucks at 20,475 compared with 11,635 in the preceding week.

For the same week a year ago, the Nation's automobile plants assembled 15,105 units.

The upturn will continue probably through all September, the survey stated.

Cuban Firm to Expand Manganese Output

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—The Cuban-American Manganese Corporation, controlled by the Freeport Sulphur Co., announced today plans for expanding the capacity of its plant at Cristo, near Santiago, Cuba, to meet U. S. war industry needs for manganese, essential in steel making.

Langbourne M. Williams, jr., president of Freeport Sulphur, said the capacity by January 1 would be stepped up to 130,000 tons of ore from 100,000 annually.

July Building Leap Reflects Arms Program

Public Construction Up 50% in Month, F. W. Dodge Reports

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 16.—A 50 per cent jump in public construction contracts in July reflected the beginning of awards under the defense program, F. W. Dodge Corporation said today.

Awards for all classes of building in July in the 37 Eastern States totaled $398,673,000, the statistical concern said, or 33 per cent more than July last year and 23 per cent greater than June.

Private construction contracts increased 19 per cent over last year. Most conspicuous in this group were commercial and manufacturing buildings and single-family houses. The latter, strong since the start of the year, is making 1940 the largest residential building year since 1929, the Dodge Co. added.

For the first seven months of the year all construction was 1 per cent ahead of the comparable 1939 stretch.

While private construction forged ahead in preceding months, gains up to July 1 were more than offset by declines in public construction. Thus the preparedness program includes a volume of construction that has begun to replace the public works programs of former years, the corporation said.

F. W. Dodge also stated that residential building contracts awarded in 89 large metropolitan areas east of the Rocky Mountains in the first half of the year rose 2 per cent above the comparable figures reported for the like 1939 period.

The dollar total was $328,538,000, a gain of $20,000,000 over the 1939 half-year total.

Baltimore, with a rise of $12,484,000, showed the largest increase over the six months' total of 1939. Pittsburgh was second with a gain of $8,234,000, followed by Detroit and Boston, up $5,896,000 and $4,377,000, respectively.

Crude Rubber Supply in U. S. Climbs in July

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—A substantial increase in stocks of crude rubber on hand and shipments en route to United States ports was reported today by the Rubber Manufacturers Association.

Domestic stocks at the end of July, the association estimated, rose to 190,222 long tons from 168,235 in June and 165,450 at the end of July, 1939. Included were 32,437 tons acquired by the Government in the cotton-rubber barter deal with England.

Rubber afloat for United States ports increased to 139,629 tons compared with 119,138 at the end of June and only 52,990 at the close of July, 1939.

Shipments from Far Eastern sources of supply have been speeded up in an effort to build reserves in this country as a precaution against trouble over the Netherlands East Indies.

Exchange Markets

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—The "free" British pound traded today in virtually the same range as the official quotation of England's war-time exchange control, closing unchanged at 4.02⅛ after selling as high as 4.03⅛ at one time during the day.

Dealers said transactions in the open market rate, restricted to business between Americans, had diminished further and predicted the "free" pound, for all practical purposes, soon may disappear, leaving business to be done entirely at the official quotations.

Hongkong and Shanghai dollars were quoted a little higher in terms of the United States dollar. The German mark nominally was down .06 to a cent.

The Canadian dollar finished unchanged at 86.62½ United States cents.

Closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars; others in cents):

Official Canadian control board rates for United States dollars: Buying, 10 per cent premium, selling 11 per cent premium, equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying 9.91 per cent, selling 9.09 per cent.

Great Britain, official (bankers' foreign exchange committee rates), selling 9.09 per cent.

Canadian dollar in New York open market 13⅜ per cent discount, or 86.62½ United States cents.

New Securities Offerings Shrink

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—The new securities market dawdled along at a slow pace again this week, new issues during the week ended yesterday totaling $33,871,923 compared with $39,562,631 the previous week and $76,649,303 in the same period last year, Poor's Publishing Co., reported today.

Corporate bond financing was at a standstill for the fourth sucessive week. Large offerings of preferred and common stock by Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., and preferred stock by Consolidated Gas & Electric Light & Power Co., of Baltimore, however, booosted the total for stock financing to the second highest level of the year.

D. C. Insurance Sales Increase 29% in July

7-Month Volume Shows 4% Climb, Bureau Reports

Washington sales of ordinary life insurance totaled $5,561,000 in July, an increase of 29 per cent over the like month last year, according to a report yesterday of the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau of Hartford, Conn.

Of the companies operating in Washington, 50 per cent showed gains. For the first seven months this year, local sales totaled $38,051,000, an increase of 4 per cent over the corresponding 1939 period.

The Washington increase in July was larger than the 22 per cent national gain. The bureau reported that national sales of ordinary life insurance aggregated $536,031,000 in July. For the first seven months, national sales totaled $3,855,931,000, unchanged from the like 1939 period.

With a jump of 50 per cent over last year, Virginia led the Nation in percentage of increase in July. Maryland showed a gain of 39 per cent in the same month and was among the leaders.

The national gain in July was the fourth consecutive month in which advances have been registered, according to the bureau.

Retail Trade Improved

Holding at better than seasonal levels, the week's retail trade throughout the Nation ran 8 to 10 per cent ahead of the corresponding period last year, Dun & Bradstreet reported yesterday.

An increase in unit volume as well as a slightly higher average of prices contributed to the expansion, the survey pointed out.

"Retailers' reports," it continued, "commented frequently on the evident willingness of customers to buy better-grade merchandise. A mild 'trading-up' tendency was noted particularly in industrial sections and included not only ready-to-wear, but durable home furnishings, radios and electrical appliances.

"Transactions in wholesale markets indicated that retailers' unwillingness to make commitments continued to lag behind the actual improvement in retail trade. Under current buying procedure spot demand has a more prominent place than usual in almost all lines of merchandise.

"The frequency of requests for hurried delivery reflects the narrow stock margins on which operations are being conducted."

Share Prices Off $1 to $3 in Thin Market; Factors: Raging Air War and Wheat Crash

New York, Aug. 16.—Intensification of the Nazi air attacks on Britain was held accountable for selling on the stock exchange here today although London's financial market had a buoyant tone, due it was reported, to "encouragement" over the showing of the Royal Air Force. Share prices dipped 1 to 3 points in local trading without any section being put to a sever test. It was another of the typically thin markets which have been the rule over the last three months.

Contributing to the lower level for most securities was pessimism over the wheat supply situation resulting from large Canadian and United States crops coming at a time when world outlets for the cereal are severely curtailed. Wheat was down the limit at Chicago during the session, but halved its loss at the close. It established new lows since August 30 last year. Cotton dropped 5 to 7 points.

Mild sagging tendencies were in evidence throughout the bond list, with declines nowhere large or significant. Foreign exchange dealings were of a nominal character. Sterling ended unchanged after making a new high at $4.03 since October last year.

Steels and coppers were weakest spots in the general list of stocks along with the independent aircraft section which lost about as much ground as it had gained earlier in the week. This emphasized the curious situation in the so-called war stocks. They are being traded precisely like other descriptions with operators declining to take a position and playing for the short turn. No doubt the flood of comment and suggestion on the tax angle of the defense program is a paramount influence.

Steel common led the list on sales of 9,000 shares with a net loss of more than a point. Bethlehem, also one of the most active stocks, was down ⅞ and Republic lost a half. Reports from the producing centers indicated that output will hold around current levels until Labor Day when a further bulge in schedules is expected.

Motors slumped along with the other groups although the first definite sign came from Detroit that assemblies of the 1941 cars is getting under way on a large scale. Output for the week at 20,475 cars and trucks was almost double that of the preceding week. General Motors gave up a point and Chrysler 1½. Graham-Paige, one of the "penny" stocks, was the third most active issue, closing at ½ for a net loss of a sixteenth on 6,800 shares.

General Electric, Lift and Anaconda, other issues traded actively, were substantial losers. Losses of a point or more were posted by Telephone, American Can, American Smelting, United Aircraft, Great Northern preferred and Sears-Roebuck. Westinghouse broke 3⅛ and du Pont was down 3½. American Shipbuilding, recently prominent on the upside, developed weakness. Several issues made new lows or equalled their previous lows, including Aviation Corporation, Boeing Airplane, Hayes Manufacturing, Interchemical Corporation and Graham-Paige.

Most of the activity in stocks came in the second hour, and while volume dried up on the decline, the lower trend was not completely halted as prices continued to slip in the afternoon. The composite for the 100 key stocks was 0.46 point off and the average loss for 10 selected aircrafts was 0.63 point. Sales were 312,300 shares.

Dun & Bradstreet reported that retail trade was 6 to 10 per cent above the levels of a year ago during the last week. Retailers, however, were said to be hesitant to place any more than hand-to-mouth orders with the wholesalers.

A circumstance which probably had no effect on the markets today—the growing tension between Greece and Italy—may be reflected later should new disturbances be provoked in the Balkans. Some of the numerous unofficial war commentators suggest that the threat to the British Empire from Italy's camoaign has been obscured by the more spectacular raids by Goering's airmen.

In Wall Street there is no change in the view that only a definite turn to the war will cause financial markets to break out of the stalemate, and that all other developments, including billions for national defense, are side issues for the time.

Listed bonds were idle and generally lower today, owing to the gloomy impression created by the bombing of London. Trading amounted to $2,740,000.

United States Treasury issues were off 1-32 to 3-32 point, with hardly any business done. New York City transit unification bonds dipped a small fraction. The usual week-end apathy was apparent in best-rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds.

Australian issues broke 1 to 3 points, as the German aerial attack widened on the home country, and Canadian bonds also were soft. German bonds improved, while Italians were unsettled. Issues of the German-occupied countries of Europe were irregular. Argentines drifted lower, and small losses also appeared in other Latin-American obligations.

Speculative railroad securities showed more small losses than gains, with all variations unimportant. Alleghany Corporation issues drifted downward, and utility holding

Contract Bridge

If the potential declarer is a fine dummy player a slam can be attempted with less caution than if he were weak. Lee Hazen, lawyer and card expert, justified his confidence and that of his partner by bringing in his small slam at spades, though it developed that he had two losers instead of one. When his long suit failed to break he resorted to a cross ruff and by careful timing managed to be in a favorable position on the twelfth trick, so that by leading toward his hand he could rob the adversaries of a trick, dissolving one loser and developing an otherwise losing trump.

The opening lead of the club was won by declarer's ace. He next played two rounds of trumps and cashed two more clubs, ruffing the fourth round in dummy. He took the ace of hearts, discarding his losing club, and trumped a heart on the return. Next he cashed the ace and king of diamonds and ruffed a third diamond in dummy. This was the position:

	♠ None ♡ Q 6 ◇ None ♣ None
♠ None ♡ K ◇ Q ♣ None	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH L. South ♠ 5 ♡ None ◇ 2 ♣ None	♠ Q ♡ None ◇ None ♣ J

By playing a heart, Lee couped the defense out of one of its winning tricks. If East trumped the heart, Lee would discard and his spade would be good at the end. If East discarded, declarer would play his five of spades for the slam-going trick.

South made six spades, losing one trump trick.

Foreign Planes Meet Heavy Fire On Swedish Coast

Stockholm (Saturday), Aug. 17 (INS).—Foreign warplanes ranged far and wide over virtually the entire length of Sweden's west coast Friday night and were met by heavy antiaircraft barrages and Swedish fighter planes.

One German bomber, it was reported, was seen at Vinga, a tiny island about 10 miles off Gothenburg.

Another foreign plane, flying over the region around Landskrona, directly opposite Copenhagen, Denmark, was turned back by antiaircraft fire.

Reservoir Completed In Stephens City

Special Dispatch to The Post

Stephens City, Va., Aug. 16.—This town's $129,999 reservoir, on which work was begun July 2, has been completed, it was announced today. The reservoir, a concrete tank which resembles a huge silo, is 22 feet in diameter. It consists of four 10-foot sections.

The water system is the town's first and was made possible by a bond issue and WPA grant totaling nearly $30,000. Popular demand for fire protection brought about the project.

Death of Boy, 9, Laid To Food Poisoning

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 16.—Robert Hollie Luechauer, 9, son of Hollie and Edna Luechauer, Dayton, Ohio, died yesterday of food poisoning at Allegany Hospital here. The child became ill while camping in New Jersey and it was found necessary to stop here while en route home to place him in a hospital. The body will be taken to Hamilton, Ohio.

Dentists Pulled 19,024 School Children's Teeth

Health department dentists last year extracted 19,024 teeth from school children.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland included this statement in his 1942 budget which calls for five additional persons for the dental service.

Sister Gets Estate

Under the will of Miss Anna M. Baker, of Germantown, Md., which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court at Rockville, her sister, Miss Sophia F. Baker, Germantown, receives the entire estate. The instrument, which was executed December 8, 1929, and which names Walter W. Dawson, Rockville, executor, does not reveal the value of the estate. The testatrix was a sister of the late Daniel W. Baker, prominent Washington attorney.

Today's Radio Highlights

WENDELL L. WILLKIE'S acceptance of the Republican nomination is today's radio news. His widely awaited speech will be heard over all local stations at 4 p. m. At 3 he will be heard from the steps of Elwood High School over WMAL, WJSV and WOL thanking Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, for his welcoming speech. (As a youth Senator Davis served as a puddler in the steel and tin mills of Elwood and later became city clerk.)

4 p. m., all stations, finds the candidate in Calloway Park, where Representative Charles A. Halleck, of Indiana, who nominated his fellow-Hoosier at the Philadelphia convention, opens the ceremonies by introducing Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, Republican national chairman. Martin will then present nominee Willkie.

5:10, WJSV and WOL—Orren Root, jr., the first Willkie Rooter.

10:45 on WJSV finds CBS presenting editorial comment throughout the Nation on the acceptance speech.

OTHER THINGS:

10 a. m., WRC—Edward MacDowell's "Woodland Sketches" is the source of three suites played by Albert Stoessel and the Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra.

12:30 p. m., WJSV—Assistant Secretary of War Robert T. Patterson discusses what the Army offers as a career to young men of the Nation.

12:30, WMAL—Howard Lindsay, co-author and title-role of "Life With Father," talks with Ika Chase.

1, WRC—Hendrik Willhelm Van Loon has been a critic of the Hitler regime so long that his comments on I'm an American can scarcely be called mere sensationalism.

3, WRC—The Budapest String Quartet plays Charles Martin Loeffler's Music for Four Stringed Instruments in the Library of Congress auditorium.

6:30, WMAL—Newport Tennis Tournament.

7:30, WRC—Harry James talks with Bill Gottlieb of Men and Batons.

8:15, WOL—Col. William J. (Wild Bill) Donovan says that "National Defense Demands Conscription."

8:30, WOL—John Charles Thomas sings with 8,000 musicians at the Chicagoland Music Festival at Soldiers' Field.

When the political battle of 1940 actually gets started today with Wendell L. Willkie's formal notification and acceptance of the Republican nomination for the Presidency, your radio will bring you all the sounds of the first barrage.

WJSV has scheduled three programs in connection with the event. The first one comes at 3:15 p. m. and in it you'll hear Mr. Willkie's informal microphone manner. He's to be presented to his friends and neighbors, as well as the radio audience, from the steps of the Elwood High School by Senator James J. Davis, another Elwood citizen who made good after having been town clerk there in 1898. In his youth Davis worked in the Elwood Steel Mills as a puddler, something that Willkie himself also has done.

From 4 to 5 p. m. the Republican nominee will make his all-important acceptance speech, his first formal national address of the campaign, from Calloway Park, a few blocks from the school.

To top things off and give you an idea of how the Nation has reacted to that speech, at 10:15 p. m., CBS is bringing you an editorial round-up of comments—excerpts from the editorials on the subject which will appear in the leading papers of the country the following morning—Washington's included.

Typical of groups emerging through church doors on August afternoons for outings are these members of the Scrooby Club of First Congregational Church. They went fishing Wednesday afternoon on Chesapeake Bay

Hamline Epworth League to Hold Sunset Meeting

Making the most of the remnant of summer, young people of numerous churches are planning outdoor meetings—some for sport and others for devotionals.

Members of the Epworth League at Hamline Methodist Church will leave the building at 5 p. m. tomorrow for a sunset meeting at Sugar Loaf Mountain.

The Scrooby Club, composed of young people of the First Congregational Church, took an outing to Breezy Point on Chespeake Bay Wednesday evening. After fishing in the bay they ate supper aboard the boat. Mrs. Walter G. Borchers, jr., wife of the assistant pastor, caught the largest fish. John R. Wells is president of the club, named for the little town in England from which a group of Pilgrims migrated.

Mary Jane Kelly, Nancy Knox, Connie Boyle and Ben Barger have returned from Blue Ridge, N. C., where they attended the Southern Regional Planning Conference of the United Christian Youth Movement. They were among 75 delegates from seven denominations in 18 States. The conference passed resolutions recognizing the responsibility of the church for action in building a more brotherly world and in working for economic justice, especially relating to sharecroppers, domestic workers and labor unions.

Miss Kelly is president of the Young People's Council of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, and Miss Knox and Boyle represented the collegian group of the same church. Barger was a representative from the Disciples of Christ churches in the District.

The Epworth League at Union Methodist Church will gather for a fellowship at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow, followed by a devotional service under the direction of Miss Evelyn Sheldon and Donald Buglass.

A fellowship tea for the youth group of Foundry Methodist Church will be held at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow. Miss Marguerite Jackman, pastor's assistant at Douglas Methodist Church, has returned from an extended vacation trip through the Eastern United States.

Adults of the church and community have been invited to join the young people and intermediates of Francis Asbury Methodist Church in their weekly "game night" at 8 p. m. Wednesday.

Church of the Week

Congo Missionary Supported By Grace Methodist Youths

By Robert Tate Allan

Rapidly becoming among Montgomery County's most progressive Christian youth groups are the Epworth League and other young people's organizations of Grace Methodist Church, Gaithersburg, Md.

PASTOR

They are conducting combined youth and adult worship services Sunday nights, supporting a missionary in Belgian Congo, Africa, and in various other ways developing church leadership and strengthening the congregation.

Particularly interesting is the project being carried out through the recently formed Young People's Missionary Circle, which has accepted full responsibility for maintenance of Miss Katheryn Eye, Methodist missionary, and whose father is a clergyman of the Howard Methodist circuit, near Baltimore.

Church-Shaped Banks

Ten young women of the circle purchased 100 church-shaped banks, each person assuming responsibility for ten banks, which have been placed in the homes of members of the congregation, who are asked to contribute 1 cent for each meal consumed by the family.

On the basis of three meals a day for a year, that system should net $1,000—representing the annual salary of Miss Eye, heretofore raised through the women's department of the former Southern Methodist Church, with which the congregation was affiliated before Methodist unification.

Missionary groups of Grace Church are raising an additional $800 for mission purposes during the current year—making a total of $1,800, or an increase of $1,150 over previous annual allotments for such enterprises.

When the Rev. William J. Elliott became pastor about two years ago he suggested handling of finances through the tithing and regular offering methods, which have proven very successful, he says, pointing out that bakes, suppers and such affairs for money-raising purposes have not been necessary.

Developed Youth Programs

Out of the intensive three-week evangelistic campaign he conducted when coming as the new pastor have grown the active youth programs, with many of those who joined the church at that time are among his most energetic an loyal workers.

The combined evening services, sponsored by the young people and with the congregations also taking part, are being discontinued during August, but will be renewed in September.

The programs have included special music, Biblical pictures and sermons. The Wesley Singers, of Baltimore, directed by Justin Lawrie, choirmaster of Foundry Methodist Church in Washington, gave a concert several weeks ago.

Leaders of the Epworth Senior League are Evelyn Elliott, 17-year-old daughter of the pastor, and Gaithersburg High School student, president; Barbara Walker, vice president; Betsy Ross Stupp, secretary, and Robert Wells, treasurer. The last-named is secretary of the church's board of stewards and, like many other youths of the congregation, teaches a Sunday school class. Ronald Phoebus is intermediate Epworth president.

Head Epworth Groups

Ann Jacobs, Lucille Magruder and Josie Elise Claggett head the special committees of the Epworth leagues. The Rev. Mr. Elliott's sons, James, 15, and Paul, 9, are very active workers in the youth organizations. Mrs. Elliott is a youth adviser.

Since the days when he was active in the Epworth League in his home church, the Raleigh Court (then Southern) Methodist Church of Roanoke, Va., where he served as league president for some time, the Rev. Mr. Elliott has been an enthusiastic Christian youth supporter.

Another active organization of Grace Church is the Ladies Aid Society, of which Mrs. M. M. Walker, also superintendent of the children's division of the Sunday school, is president. She is a sister-in-law of Harry Hoskinson, Methodist layman, of Washington.

Interesting Personalities

Among interesting personalities of Grace Church, at Frederick and Walker avenues, is 82-year-old John E. Claggett, member for more than 60 years and whose son is the Rev. Raymond W. Claggett, of Fredericksburg, Va., former member of Grace Church.

There is also Clyde M. Thomas, chairman of the board of stewards and prominent Montgomery County businessman; Mrs. Thomas, his wife, chairman of the church's board of Christian education and Missionary Society official; Walter M. MacGruder, former member of the Maryland House of Delegates and recently retired from the position of board of stewards chairmanship because of ill health, and John Robertson, Sunday school superintendent.

The Rev. Herman H. M. Wilson, superintendent of the Methodist Home for the Aged at Gaithersburg, and Mrs. Wilson are likewise very active.

First Baptist Will Hear Church Leader

"Personal Faith in a Time of Social Chaos" will be the theme for Dr. Earl F. Adams, of New York, general director of promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention, at the evening service tomorrow at First Baptist Church.

At the morning service he will speak on "Realistic Idealism." "The Builder," by Cadman, will be sung by Alfred Trask, barytone.

Ethelyn Shaeffer and a group from the Euzelian Class will present a program tonight at the children's emergency home of Central Union Mission.

Chevy Chase. The Rev. Walter T. Lawton, jr., active in Christian Endeavor work, will preach at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow on "A Small Town Man." No evening services will be held in August during the vacation of the pastor, the Rev. Edward O. Clark.

Takoma Park. The Rev. Charles Everard Deems, pastor of Livingston Avenue Baptist Church, New Brunswick, N. J., will preach at the morning service tomorrow in the pastor's absence on vacation.

Fifth Baptist. J. Herrick Hall, junior minister of the church, will speak at 11 a. m. on "Incessant Labor," and at the 7:45 p. m. service on "A Blueprint of Life." As a special feature of the latter service, Mrs. George Kettering, of Arlington, Va., will present a group of children in a review of Bible doctrines.

Rev. S. G. Spottswood To Preside at Sacrament

The Rev. Stephen Gill Spottswood, minister of John Wesley A. M. E. Zion Church, will administer the sacrament of the Lord's Suppeer at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow. He will preach at 8 p. m. on "The Sea of Galilee."

Church Recreation Leaders' Institute Opens August 26

To prepare for more vital recreational programs next winter in churches and Sunday schools, a Church Recreational Leaders' Institute will be held at the Y. M. C. A. Camp Letts, Edgewater, Md., August 26-September 2.

Said to be the first of its kind in this vicinity, the institute is sponsored by the District Sunday School Association, the District Federation of Baptist Young People's Unions, the District Christian Endeavor Union and the Methodist Young People.

Leaders will be Walter E. Kirker, director of physical education, Y. M. C. A., Harrisburg, Pa.; Walton L. MacMillan, assistant pastor, Grace Baptist Church, Washington, and Ralph W. Foster, director, department of physical education, Central Y. M. C. A., Washington. The course will include instruction in planning parties, banquets, stunt nights, and in conducting singing, dramatics, competitive social programs and other activities.

The institute is open to young men and women of Washington and nearby cities. Foster, at the Y. M. C. A., is accepting registrations.

A Chaplain Tells of War Games:

15 Pastors Learn to Rough It, For They're in the Army Now

Duties of Ministers at N. Y. Maneuvers Are Manifold, but Bolstering Morale Of the Troops Is Their Chief Purpose

By Lieut. Col. Churchill J. Gibson
Chaplain 29th Division

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 16.—When maneuvers take men of the Twenty-ninth Division into the countryside at night with their pup tents—along with them, with his bedding roll on the ground sleeps (?) the erstwhile pastor of a city church, stripped of all his usual comforts. And he rises at 3 a. m. to eat his breakfast from a metal mess kit.

Lieut. Col. Gibson

Fifteen chaplains are sharing this experience with the men of the Twenty-ninth Division from the District of Columbia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia in their current maneuvers.

Three of them are from Washington: The Rev. Arlington A. McCallum, of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 260th Coast Artillery; the Rev. Simpson B. Daugherty, United Brethren Memorial Church, 121st Engineer Regiment; Chaplain Speer Strahan, professor of English at Catholic University, who is attached to Division Headquarters.

Rev. Daugherty

Of the 15, 5 are Episcopalians, 2 Lutherans, 2 Methodists, 2 Presbyterians, 2 United Brethren, 1 Baptist and 1 Roman Catholic.

Before the tent of the regimental chaplain flies his blue flag bearing a white cross and on his shirt collar gleams a silver cross. Any man of any grade can see him without permission day or night.

In the field, why is he there? He is the church in the field with the men. He does not bear arms, but what he has is a potent factor in strengthening the inner man. A word of encouragement, a word of prayer in season, a hand to help with a wounded man on a journey to the edge of the great unknown, with a man who is spent; this is war. In these war games his dealings are with the spirits of man and that means the morale of the Army.

In camp, the chaplain has a multitude of interests and duties. His recreation tent supplies games for off times and the means of writing home. He helps with the mail and with the canteen. He organizes sightseeing trips in this north country for Southern boys. He oversees the movies which are provided and sees to the band. All these are adjuncts to his real job which is individually and corporately in his organization to minister to the religious life of his men.

Sundays in camp are pretty fine. In this great army two central services have been provided in the stadium of St. Lawrence University in Canton, N. Y. A great gathering of the Protestant men on the first Sunday in camp (August 11), and a great field mass on the second Sunday (August 18) for the Roman Catholics.

"Onward Christian Soldiers"

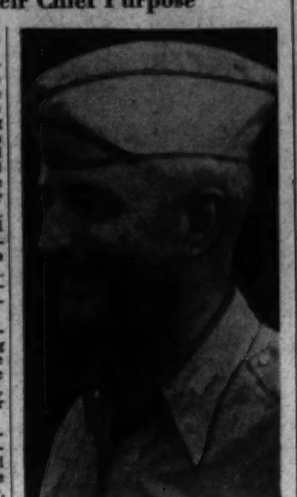
This is not the story, however, for the sight and sound that stirs the heart are in gathering in each organization about 9 o'clock of a Sunday morning. The air is alive with strains of "Onward Christian Soldiers" from each regimental band as, with colors flying, the lines of soldiers move to some central place where the chaplain meets his own men for prayer, praise, and thanksgiving; the Army is moving to church.

In addition to this there is a field mass each Sunday in some central place for the Roman Catholic men, and, as occasion may provide, a service for the men of Jewish faith conducted by a Jewish chaplain with his insignia of the Tables of the Law surmounted by the Star of Judah. Opportunity is further provided, where possible, for men to be transported to the church of their choice in some nearby town for local services.

The job of a regimental chaplain is a great job in a multitude of ways. He is the freest officer or man in the Army, and the man least concerned with rank. He is a member of the staff of his commanding officer, and is his consultant in matters that pertain to religion or morals. It is good for the families at home to know that the chaplain is standing by to lend a hand to any man who needs it.

In addition to the three chaplains from Washington, there are the following:

Episcopalians—Chaplains Richard H. Baker, St. David's Church, Baltimore, 110th Field Artillery; J. Lewis Biggs, Emmanuel Church, Staunton, Va., 116th Virginia Infantry; Churchill J. Gibson, St. James' Church, Richmond, division chaplain; James R. McAllister, St. James' parish, Boydton, Va., First Virginia Infantry.



The Rev. Mr. McCallum

Lutherans—Chaplains Frank M. Brown, director of the Luther Hospital, Philadelphia, attached to the 116th Virginia Infantry; Jay P. Harman, Lutheran Church, Greensburg, Pa., 176th Field Artillery.

Methodists—Chaplains Edgar C. Powers, former secretary of the Methodist Bible Society, Baltimore, 104th Medical Regiment, and Fred C. Reynolds, Grace Church, Baltimore, First Maryland Infantry.

Presbyterians — Chaplains Paul Buckles, First Presbyterian Church, Newport News, Va., 111th Field Artillery, and James E. Moore, International Washington Church, Baltimore, Fifth Maryland Infantry.

United Brethren—Chaplain Russell L. Shay, Colonial Park Church, Harrisburg, Pa., attached to the 104th Quartermaster Regiment.

Baptist—Chaplain John G. Lambrides, Laurel and Berwyn Baptist Churches, Md., attached to the Fifth Maryland Infantry.

"GOD OF OUR FATHERS"
— — RUDYARD KIPLING

God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle-line,
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine;
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget

Written in 1897 for Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee, this patriotic hymn is a solemn warning against the perils of imperialism which was then sweeping over the country. Its stirring message is not only a Peace anthem, but a tonic for true patriotism.
